B.C. Loses PWA Bid

The Canadian Transport Commission has denied B.C.'s application to prevent Pacific Western Airlines from moving its head office and main overhaul base from Vancouver to Alberta, it was announced today.

The shift would mean the loss of more than 550 jobs to B.C.

PWA's 49-member executive staff would be accompanied by another 508 support staff which includes mechanics, maintenance personnel and office workers.

Total cost of the proposed transfer has been estimated at as much as $5 million.

In its decision, the commission said it is not convinced the interests of British Columbia will be "seriously and permanently jeopardized" if the move is carried out.

"The attorney-general of British Columbia has not demonstrated that irreparable harm will be caused by the move," it said.

The Alberta government, which acquired control of the airline in a controversial action two years ago, announced last year that it intended to move the head office to Calgary and the overhaul base to Edmonton. Both now are at Vancouver.

The B.C. government said it was concerned that the cost of the move might be reflected in higher air fares, but the commission said it intended "not to allow the carrier to pass through to the consumer any of the costs of the move of this head office unless they can demonstrate that there were offsetting cost benefits flowing from the move."

Pacific Western — Canada's third largest commercial airline — operates scheduled flights in British Columbia, Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

The dispute, in which British Columbia asked the transport commission to intercede two months ago, was dealt with through an exchange of written correspondence rather than through a hearing.

Much of the exchange centred on whether the commission had jurisdiction in the case, with Alberta arguing that it did not.

The commission ruled it had jurisdiction in the case on grounds the licences it regulates require a certain level of service, equipment and facilities at a particular base and that withdrawal of management personnel from a base could affect such requirements.

An earlier decision by the commission that the Alberta government must seek its approval of the PWA takeover now is before the Supreme Court.

HIJACKER USED TOY GUNS

PALMA, Mallorca (AP) — A young Libyan hijacked one of his country's airliners with 86 persons aboard today but surrendered after the plane landed on the Mediterranean holiday island of Mallorca, airport spokesmen here reported.

The hijacker, identified only as a man opposed to the Libyan regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy, gave up to airport police and turned over two toy pistols and two knives to the chief of the airport, the spokesmen said.

They said no one was injured and the passengers were being looked after by airport authorities.

Officials in Algiers said the hijacked Boeing 727 jetliner had landed previously at Boufarik air base, 20 miles south of Algiers, after being refused permission to land at the Tunis and Algiers airports.

Israel Buries Hero

Times News Services

TEL AVIV—As Israel gave a hero's funeral today to the U.S.-born commando killed in Sunday's raid into Uganda, the Jewish state said it will continue to act as it sees fit to protect its citizens anywhere in the world.

Additional Israeli troops were sent to bolster border defences Monday but the nation appeared calm in the face of Arab anger over the the raid. Sources here denied reports that Israel had called a full military alert.

Officials also urged those nations having civil aviation ties with Israel to increase security measures or face possible sanctions.

Minister of Transport Gad Yaacobi said he also asked airlines that fly from Israel to curtail stopovers at airports lacking proper security facilities. He did not cite any specific airports.

Two of the three Israeli civilians killed in the gun battle Saturday night were buried Monday with military honors.

Speaking at one of the funerals, Israel's chief military chaplain, Brig. Mordechai Piron, said the 2,400-mile three-plane commando raid "was a magnificent, courageous operation, but it is the fate of this nation that every joy and delight be mixed with pain and mourning."

Threats of retaliation from Palestinians in Lebanon and from President Idi Amin of Uganda, did nothing to diminish the pride and rejoicing of the Israelis in their armed forces' most-notable exploit since the defeat of the Arabs in the 1967 Six-Day War.

Amin's threats aroused concern only because one of the Israeli passengers on the hijacked Air France airliner, 75-year-old Dora Bloch, was in a Kampala hospital when the commandos landed, and they could not bring her back. The Israeli government appealed to the International Red Cross and an unidentified third country to secure her release.

MONTERREY (AP)—Guerrillas made off with $423,200 in one of the smoothest and most audacious bank robberies ever seen in Mexico, a police spokesman said today.

He said five members of the September 23rd Communist League, Mexico's most notorious guerrilla band, staged the hold-up Monday at the Bank of London and Mexico.

Taiwan Olympic Showdown Looms

Times News Services

With the Montreal Olympics only 11 days away, Canada and the International Olympic Committee appeared headed for a last-minute showdown over the status of Taiwan.

Taiwan announced today from Taipei that its Olympic delegation will set out for Montreal Thursday in defiance of Canada's ban on Taiwanese athletes competing as the Republic of China.

Some Taiwanese athletes, including represenatives in the Olympic sailing competition in Kingston, Ont., are already in Canada.

Canada Monday rejected a demand by the People's Republic of China to ban Taiwanese athletes, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachern said. But he also refused to alter policy that these athletes enter Canada only as Taiwanese representatives.

MacEachern said officials of his department are willing to meet IOC president Lord Killanin, who arrived in Canada Monday seeking a solution to the problem.

Some observers saw a turn for the better when Killanin, while non-commital, did not reject a Canadian proposal that the IOC revive a 1960 formula under which Taiwanese athletes competed in the Rome Olympics only as Taiwan without carrying the name of the Republic of China.

But Killanin asserted that Canada's action could establish a dangerous precedent for the 1980 Games in Moscow.

"I will not commit myself in any way," Killanin replied to requests by MacEachern and Prime Minister Trudeau to extend to Canada the same rights granted Italy regarding the Taiwan question.

Killanin repeated accusations he made before his arrival that Canada had violated IOC rules in denying Taiwanese athletes their republican name, anthem and flag at the Games.

And he pointed out that while the Taiwanese competed in Rome under the 1960 agreement, the athletes unfurled a banner proclaiming their protest in the Olympic stadium.

Canada extended official recognition to the Peking government in diplomatic terms in 1970, withdrawing recognition of the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

MYSTERY DIVE: Neither police nor spectators seemed to know who drove this car that ended strung up on a telephone pole guywire in New Westminster. However, they suspect a three-year-old tot, left unattended in the car, released the hand brake causing the vehicle to roll backwards downhill, through an intersection. The unidentified tot was uninjured.

Kinsmen Must Pay $25,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who was injured at a Kinsmen beer garden in Nanaimo nearly two years ago when a man fell 30 feet onto him from a rafter has been awarded $25,000 in damages against the club.

The would-be aerial performer, who called himself Sunshine, escaped without a scratch and hasn't been seen since.

Mr. Justice S. Martin Toy ruled that the Kinsmen Club of Nanaimo "failed to take reasonable care that the patrons . . . were reasonably safe while enjoying themselves in their afternoon and evening of beer drinking."

The injured guest, Robert Jacobson, 34, of Bowser, suffered neck shoulder injuries and has been receiving treatment since the July 21, 1974 mishap.

Half an hour after the doors opened at 2 p.m. a man in his early 20s climbed one of the vertical T-beams, made his way along a cross beam, then lowered his trousers and "flashed a moon."

He descended to the roars of the crowd and a few minutes later want back up, this time with a friend, but he merely drank beer at the top.

Later a third man trying the same stunt reached the top of the I-beam and was walking along a cross girder when he either slipped or deliberately lowered his body so he was swinging by his hands.

And as he tried to swing his legs back over the girder he lost his grip and plunged 30 feet, landing on top of Jacobson who was sitting at a table drinking beer.

Mr. Justice Toy noted that though Jacobson was injured and knocked unconscious, the would-be aerial performer — who later gave his name as "Sunshine" — escaped with only his pride injured.

He held that in view of the two previous impromptu and unauthorized aerial performances by beer garden patrons, the Kinsmen club was liable for Jacobson's injuries because it didn't try to prevent the third episode.

Rich, Poor Provinces Split Over Finances

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-day federal-provincial conference of finance ministers on three federally proposed options for limiting Ottawa's direct contributions to several social programs opened here today with apparent disagreement between rich and poor provinces.

Walter Smishek, Saskatchewan finance minister, told reporters the poorer provinces will lose money under the federal options. He said Ottawa should continue the present policy of paying 50 per cent of an average on medical care, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

However, Merv Leitch, the Alberta minister, said the federal proposals do not go far enough in giving the provinces additional tax-raising power.

One federal option is to provide half the costs through cash grants under an undetermined formula and the remainder in tax powers. This would transfer to the provinces the federal excise tax on alcohol, 7.5 per cent of federal income tax and one per cent of federal corporation tax—a package said to be currently worth more than $2.5 billion.

Another option would have Ottawa provide two-thirds of the costs in cash grants and one-third taxing power. This would include the personal and corporate taxation but exclude the alcohol excise tax, now worth about $800 million.

A third option is for Ottawa to provide its entire share in cash grants, which would be controlled by the federal government, rather than the current matching-dollar system.

BIG BILLS NO GOOD IN COMMONS' CAFE

OTTAWA (CP)—Cashiers in the parliamentary restaurant and cafeterias continue to refuse new $50 and $100 bills except if proof of identification is presented and Bill Clarke (PC—Vancouver Quadra) wants to know why.

"I ask the minister how the government expects our system of currency to operate when the House of Commons itself refuses to accept legal tender?" Mr. Clarke asked Finance Minister Donald MacDonald in the Commons on Monday.

Mr. Clarke said he raised the question earlier and was told that the design of the bills was too easy to counterfeit.

But despite the circulation of the newly-designed bills, cashiers still were demanding signatures and addresses of people presenting the bills, he said.

MacDonald promised to look into the question.

RUSSIANS PLACED IN ORBIT

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union today launched a new Soyuz spacecraft with a two-man crew to carry out joint experiments with the orbital space laboratory Salyut 5, the news agency Tass reported.

On board the Soyuz are 41-year-old Boris Volynov, the mission commander, and flight engineer Vitaly Zholobov, 39.

Tass said Volynov has made one previous space flight, aboard Soyuz 5 in January, 1969, while Zholobov is in space for the first time.

Tass did not spell out whether their craft, Soyuz 21, will dock with Salyut 5, which has been in earth orbit since June 22.

But Zholobov's experience as reserve flight engineer for the Salyut 3 space station suggested that a docking is planned.

Revenge Attack

BEIRUT (UPI) — Thousands of Leftist and Palestinian troops attacked the Christian town of Chekka today to avenge the 15-day siege of a Palestinian refugee camp.

Fighting on all fronts gave Lebanon the bloodiest fighting of the 15-month-old war and destroyed the latest Arab League peace efforts.

Casualties were estimated at more than 260 dead and 500 wounded — the worst one day total since April, 1975.

Fighting was reported at Chekka, at the Palestinian refugee camp of Tal Zaatar, in the Christian town of Zghorta, and along the 35-mile confrontation line in Beirut.

The Leftist-Palestinian forces moved against Chekka, 10 miles south of Tripoli, after the Christians launched another offensive to close a 400-yard gap in their circle around Tal Zaatar.

Heavy fighting around the camp in southeast Beirut blocked the second attempt by the Red Cross in two days to send a convoy into the camp to evacuate hundreds of wounded who have been without water and medical supplies for days.

Olympic Dry Run

MONTREAL (CP)—Clerks and cashiers in publicly-owned liquor stores went on strike here Monday and promised to make a bottle of liquor a hard item to buy during this month's Olympic Games.

The strike closed all liquor stores Monday in greater Montreal as well as other Quebec communities which are hosting Olympic events.

Union leaders admitted the strike will not affect bars or restaurants here, which have ample supplies to see them through the Olympic period.

Voodoo Crash Probe

COMOX — A shore and sea search for the missing body of pilot Capt. Leslie John Cox, 32, of Comox, continues today after a CF-101 Voodoo jet fighter crashed without warning Monday into the Strait of Georgia.

Crash boats and a Labrador helicopter are combing the shores and chilly waters today and decision will be made soon on whether the Voodoo wreckage will be hoisted 400-feet from the sea bottom, about two miles northeast of the Canadian Forces base at Lazo.

The body of navigator Capt. Roy James Smith, 29, of Kelowna was pulled from the water by a boater shortly after the accident, when nearby pleasure craft and the Sechelt Queen ferry rushed to the site.

An internal board of inquiry composed of senior officers will be set up immediately to investigate the crash, Mayor Denny Ryan, information officer for the Pacific Coast Command said today.

Three CFB Comox aircraft were participating in a formation training stint when Cox's plane made a scheduled break-away from the formation to fly solo, Ryan said.

There was routine radio transmission between the three aircraft prior to the crash, but none to indicate any problems in the Cox aircraft.

The aircraft were practising for summer air shows at Edmonton and Abbotsford and were almost near the end of the 30-minute training session when the aircraft crashed. There was no evidence of either men trying to eject.

One year ago, almost to the day, July 4, at 2:40 p.m. a similar crash occurred when a Voodoo jet crashed into the sea 500 yards off Kin Beach.

Record Loads on Ferries to U.S.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

While the B.C. Ferries are sometimes running half empty, Black Ball and Washington State Ferries from Vancouver Island are doing a record business, spokesmen for the companies said today.

Pat Frumento, district manager for Black Ball Transportation Inc., said traffic is up 12 to 15 per cent on the Victoria to Port Angeles run.

"Most of the increase is due to Canadians trying to save a few dollars," he said.

"There is a slight increase in American traffic but the big increase is in Canadians using our run instead of B.C. Ferries."

Washington State Ferries deputy general manager Ralph White said traffic on the Sidney to Anacortes run is up 8 per cent.

While Americans were staying home for the July 4 holiday, Canadians were filling the vessels, he said.

Traffic on the Marguerite between Victoria and Seattle is also up by about 15 per cent.

Frumento said that while traffic is at record levels, so are the complaints.

He said American visitors are very upset by the high price structure in Victoria and they are cutting short their vacations to return to the U.S.

"One man said he would wait in line several hours rather than have to pay $38 for another night in Victoria. It is clear we are slowly pricing ourselves out of the tourist industry.

"It is not just a few people. A large number of tourists are grumbling and complaining about the prices."

Frumento said Victoria will have to find a way to reduce prices and promote Vancouver Island or it could face a further decline in visitors in future years.

"I have talked to a number of businessmen and there is no doubt tourist spending is down this year. And nobody seems to be doing much about it.

Except for the Empress Hotel, nobody seems to be in the United States selling visitors on the idea of coming to Victoria. A few years ago there was a vigorous promotion campaign but now they just seem to be sitting back and waiting for the tourists to come."

Frumento said he is concerned about the future of the industry, despite the brisk business on the Coho this year.

Meanwhile, in Seattle, tourist officials said they have noticed a small increase in the number of Americans crossing into Canada since the July 4 holiday.

Fears that the Americans might decide to stay home for the whole summer may be premature, they said.

Now that the July 4 holiday is over, American tourists appear to be returning to normal summer holiday patterns.

PETTIT QUITS GOV'T JOB

Wilmer Pettit, who is suing Health Minister Robert McClelland, said Monday he has quit his job with the provincial government.

Pettit was demoted from director of the hospital finance division at the end of April because of what McClelland said was the premature payment of $4.5 million to five hospitals.

The health minister was under attack at the time by the opposition which said the payments had been made to pad the amount of money sent to hospitals last year. He said the cheques had been sent without consultation and had since been returned.

Pettit said Monday his resignation toof effect June 22.

In May he filed a suit against McClelland claiming unspecified damages for alleged slander, wrongful dismissal from his directorship and financial loss.

Canada-ECM Link Comes Into Effect

By STEPEHN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's long-sought and unprecedented contractual link with Europe became a reality today.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen and two top Europeans signed an agreement between Canada and the European Economic Community (EEC) which bound the two sides to vaguely defined commercial and economic co-operation.

Afterwards Mr. MacEachen, Foreign Minister Max Van der Stoel of the Netherlands, president of the European council, and Sir Christopher Soames, vice-president of the EEC commission, gave a news conference and then toasted each other at an official lunch.

"The implementation of the agreement should in particular facilitate the expansion of industrial co-operation between Canada and Europe," a communique on the five-page, nine-article agreement said.

The agreement will be for five years after it comes into effect, presumably after there is provinial approval to some sections. It can be ended by either signatories after the five years, subject to one year's notice.

It leaves to other times the means for increasing business envisaged in the generalities of the articles and the ringing preambular declarations.

The signing ends a search started by the Trudeau government in 1974 as part of its intention to reduce Canada's dependence on the United States.

It recognizes the desire of both for a direct link which will support, complement and extend co-operation between them and said the parties are resolved to "consolidate, deepen and diversify their commercial and economic relations to the full extent of their growing capacity to meet each other's requirements on the basis of mutual benefit."

The agreement gives each signatory most-favored-nation treatment without providing tariff or customs preferences.

TAHSIS FIRES SALVO OVER WELFARE COSTS

A spat is looming between the village of Tahsis and the Union of British Columbia Municipalities.

Tahsis is upset because UBCM president Mayor Muni Evers has written Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm suggesting small communities pay, for the first time, a share of welfare costs.

Tahis claims Evers acted without UBCM authority and that welfare is rarely handed out in small communities.

Letters of protest from Tahsis have gone out to Evers, Vander Zalm, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis and all B.C. municipalities.

Saanich council received its copy Monday but declined to take any action after Mayor Ed Lum pointed out the spat was between Tahsis and Evers and Saanich should not get involved.

ning strike, brushed aside reported criticism of the operation by UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

"It is not the UN secretary general who admonished us today, who will maintain Israel's sovereignty," Yaacobi said.

Meanwhile, The Israeli government is expected to look into the possibility of death sentences for convicted guerrillas.

Political sources said today Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin wants his cabinet to review the government's policy of never executing a Palestinian guerrilla.

The said Rabin told a closed meeting of the ruling coalition Monday night that a life sentence for a guerrilla convicted of murder was "an opening for blackmail."

The cabinet likely will meet within a few weeks to discuss the issue, the sources add.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachern said the Israeli action to free 100 hostages held by terrorists in Uganda will be "widely applauded" as the fist major setbackto international terorism.

He told the Commons the airborne commando raid on Uganda's Entebbe airport was a "well-executed and remarkable feat" which would "strike a responsive chord among many Canadians."

However, MacEachen cautiously avoided committing the government to a congratulatory stance, saying all the "legal ramifications" had to be studied.

The following persons are requested to contact the nearest detachment of the RCMP for an urgent personal message: Dieter Bartsch, Whitby, Ont.; Glen Charbonneau, India; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mangrum, China Lake, Calif.; Don and Irene Maxwell, Edson, Alta.; Ian McGilvray, West Vancouver; Edward Whelpdale, Los Angeles; Christ and Irene Stoubis, Melville, Sask.; Ben and Nettie Zirk, Quesnel.

Safety Issue Ducked

Saanich council has again ducked the issue of safety to cyclists and pedestrians on Tudor Avenue.

It voted Monday to hand the problem over to its public works committee.

The committee will consider the costs of either installing a three-foot gravel shoulder on one or both sides of the road as compared to providing asphalt sidewalks.

Public works committee chirman Ald. Sandy Noel tried unsuccessfully Monday to get approval to hold a referendum to have the work done under a Local Improvements Plan which would have residents paying part of the costs.

He pointed out there were two factions in the Ten Mile Point area. One was clamoring for the road to be widened.

The other, he said, wants a footpath through a wooded area near the narrow road.

The area includes 70 acres owned by Broadmead Devlopers and Noel said the footpath advocates are willing to wait for Broadmead to develop the area.

Council also received requests to reduce the speed limit on Tudor in order to increase safety. A decision on this was also shelved, council deciding to refer it to the administrative traffic committee.

23 YACHTS MISSING

HALIFAX (CP)—The search and rescue centre said today 23 of 70 yachts still at sea in a single-handed transatlantic race from Plymouth, England, to Newport, R.I., have not been seen or heard from despite a look-out alert to planes and ships in the North Atlantic issued this week.

No search operations are in progress for any of the yachts. There is speculation that some may not have radio transmitting equipment. Others might be trying to conceal their position from competitions.

One of the yachts which left Plymouth early last month was abandoned by its operator when he injured his arm in a storm at sea.

Another yacht was found abandoned off Greenland.

Metric Move Stymies Central Saanich Plan

Central Saanich's new zoning plan which is just one step away from becoming law received a slight set-back Monday when some aldermen said they want more time to discuss final reading.

Ald. Don MacLaurin moved that final reading of the zoning bylaw be postponed so council can look through a report on the public hearing held last week.

He said he had several points he wants to discuss included whether the bylaw should be geared to metric measure.

Council agreed to call a special meeting next Monday for the final reading.

But Ald. Dave Hill was concerned about the reasons why aldermen want a postponement.

He said council has already spent $20,000 on a consultant, held three public meetings, published three newsletters and discussed the bylaw point by point in about 20 meetings over the past year.

Hill said today the advisory planning commission favors the bylaw and the public has been involved all along.

He said if aldermen want to change the bylaw, even to the extent of changing the zoning of one parcel of land, then another public hearing would have to be held.

"If any aldermen had any major concerns, they should have been brought up long ago," Hill said.

"We tried to make it one of the best community-minded plans possible. I feel it's one of the best in the entire region."

At the meeting, Hill said council was afraid to m ake a decision now that it was "near the crunch." He asked that anyone who saw major problems in the bylaw to bring them out at once, but his challenge wasn't taken up.

Hill said today nobody is going to be completely happy with a zoning bylaw, but he said he feels theirs is the best one possible. In supporting the motion to postpone final reading for a week, Ald. George MacFarlane said he had objected to the first two readings of the bylaw because the document was in an unreadable form, but he went along because the readings were needed to enact a building freeze.

Then he voted for third reading so the bylaw could go to a public hearing and full debate, he said. Now he wanted to read the points brought up at the public hearing.

Ald. Frank Waring and Ald. Percy Lazarz were in favor of a special meeting to give them more time to consider points made at the hearing.

MYSTERY COMA

TORONTO (CP)—Doctors are doing tests to discover the origin and type of encephalitis caught by a 22-year-old Israeli man, now in a coma in hospital, after a camping trip to Algonquin Park last month, a Toronto doctor said Monday.

Dr. Joel Cooper said Avner Erlich of Tel Aviv was visiting a friend, Debbie Silver of Toronto, when the two went camping in the park.

Dr. Cooper, Miss Silver's family doctor, said that on June 27 Erlich had headaches and sickness tentatively diagnosed as encephalitis. Miss Silver's tests were negative.

Doug Enright, a health ministry spokesman, said tests have eliminated that Erlich has St. Louis, Powassan or California strains of encephalitis.

Tests, however, have not shown which variety he has and more tests are planned.

The ministry spokesman said doctors are studying the possibility that the man got encephalitis while camping in the park and that Ontario may have two varieties of encephalitis.

A number of persons in southwestern Ontario have suffered from the St. Louis stain.

Sentimental Sinclair?

"That's right folks.

I've never been short of good business reasons for buying Sterling Silver Olympic Coins.

But with the excitement building fast, and with the world on it's way to Canada for the 1976 Olympics, you can't blame a guy for feeling proud or even a bit sentimental.

That's why Series VII coins are so precious. They're real money but they have a value that goes beyond dollars and cents.

They're the last series of Olympic Coins to be minted, and will be the best souvenir you can buy of this great event.

But don't wait around!

With a lot of people feeling the same way as me and with all those visitors coming, these beautiful works of art might not be as easy to buy later on.

So buy them this week before the rush starts."

Exiles May Find Canada Home

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A group of Chilean exiles who fear for their lives and refuse to leave the Canadian Embassy where they took refuge last Friday may end up in Canada.

Embassy spokesman Brian Long said Monday the embassy cannot grant the 27 exiles permanent asylum in the building but possibly may provide them with visas for Canada.

The group — 10 men, 10 children and seven women — entered the embassy office on the 25th floor of the 30-storey building in downtown Buenos Aires Friday and refused to leave.

Long said the Canadian government has a special program for refugees of the 1973 Chilean coup.

He said the group at the embassy felt threatened in Argentina. A diplomatic source said names of some of the refugees may have been on a list stolen three weeks ago by armed men.

Two days after the robbery, 25 Chileans and Uruguayans were kidnapped from their Buenos Aires hotels and held captive for 24 hours. On their release, they said they were told to leave Argentina and most have done so

"My government is seeking a solution but there has been no break," Long said.

"The matter now is in Ottawa and Argentine authorities have been notified."

Long added that he did not believe a quick solution is possible.

The Argentine military regime, installed after the bloodless March 24 coup that ousted President Isabel Peron, has said it would welcome departure of refugees in the country because some are believed to be aiding leftist guerrillas.

The local office of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees says there are an estimated 25,000 Latin refugees in Argentina, but only 8,000 are legally registered as refugees.

POLICE HUNT ESCAPER

A Canada-wide warrant has been issued for the arrest of a 25-year-old inmate of William Head federal prison who went missing while out on a temporary pass Saturday night.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said Monday Brant Sidney Hodson was allowed out to attend a session at the federal community corrections centre on Pandora but failed to return to prison at his 11 p.m. scheduled deadline. He was reported missing to police 12 hours later.

Hodson, described as six feet three inches tall, 185 pounds, blue eyes, brown shoulder length hair and a Fu Manchu mustache, was serving four years for armed robbery committed in Vancouver early in 1975. He was due for release on March 14, 1978.

Callaghan Visits Belfast

BELFAST (Reuter) — Surrounded by security guards and driven in a bullet-proof car, Prime Minister James Callaghan toured army and police barracks in a surprise one-day visit to Belfast Monday.

It was his first visit from London to Northern Ireland province since becoming prime minister last April.

As home secretary seven years ago he sent in troops to deal with the sectarian strife, and at a conference with army chiefs Monday he said he never envisaged the crisis would continue so long, with a death toll of almost one person a day.

During a 40-minute walk around the capital he told one shopper:

"Only you, the people of Northern Ireland, will solve this problem. Only you will decide when you are ready to live with one another. Don't ask me to solve the problem of the communities living together: It is not something I can do."

Later, in a speech to social and community workers, Callaghan condemned what he called the "brutal and senseless killing and violence" perpetrated by Catholic and Protestant extremists.

"Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom and will not cease to be part of the U.K. unless it is the clear wish of the majority that the links should be severed," he said.

African 'Summit' Ends in Discord

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius (UPI) — A four-day summit meeting of the Organization of African Unity ended today in disarray, failing to solve major continental problems and facing several new crises.

Delegates said it was one of the most disappointing and divisive meetings of heads of state in OAU history, attended by a record low number of seven leaders.

The summit approved more than 70 resolutions, but many of them sidestepped major problems or were watered-down versions of original drafts on such issues as South Africa.

The conference failed to heal long-standing and potentially dangerous differences between Ethiopia and Somalia over the future of French Somalitland and between rival factions of the Rhodesian African National Council.

It sidestepped the issue of the Western Sahara, where Algerian-backed guerrillas have been waging a hit-and-run war against Morocco and Mauritania, which annexed the territory last year.

The meeting referred the question to a special summit meeting to be convened at a place and time to be announced later.

The Israeli raid into Uganda and an attempted coup in Sudan presented the 48-member organization with major new problems.

Although Kenya endorsed a resolution condemning Israel for the attack, Nairobi came under cricticism from many member states for its apparent co-operation with Tel Aviv.

President Jaafar Numeiry of Sudan made a special trip to the closing session to accuse Libya of masterminding last week's "mad and senseless" attempt to topple him from power.

Libyan spokesman Ali Toureki denied Benghazi was involved and in turn accused Sudan of "collusion" with the United States both in Lebanon and against the Palestinian people.

PRETORIA SCRAPPING AFRIKAANS SCHEME

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The South African government has decided to withdraw the compulsory use of the Afrikaans language in schools, Education Minister M. C. Botha said today.

The use of Afrikaans led to riots in black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria last month in which 176 people died and more than 1,000 were injured.

Botha said that instead of having to teach in both English and Afrikaans, black schools now can choose either.

Student Work Claims Rapped

Public statements made recently by two of the University of Victoria Alma Mater Society executive members criticizing governments for student unemployment, have in turn been criticized by the president of the society.

Alistair Palmer said a press release put out by vice-president Brian Gardiner and academic affairs chairman John Luton which was published in both Victoria daily newspapers June 26 contained statements which were both "unconstitutional and incorrect."

Gardiner and Luton had blamed the provincial and federal governments for the lack of summer job opportunities for students and urged students to mount a letter-writing campaign to their MLAs and MPs.

They blamed the provincial government for "severely crippling the Island tourist industry," citing the increases in B.C. Ferries rates and Insurance Corporation of B.C. premiums.

The federal government was criticized for cutbacks in Opportunities for Youth programs and Local Initiatives Projects, and for tightened regulations for unemployment insurance benefits.

But Palmer suggested there was a conflict of interest in the positions of his two colleagues, saying they were in a position to use the AMS to "promote their own beliefs and party interests."

Palmer said both Gardiner and Luton are members of the NDP club at UVic and are employed with the provincial government.

Palmer said he was the constituted spokesman for the society and any policy statements, unless otherwise directed by the AMS council, would be made through the president's office.

"There is without a doubt a lot of animosity on my council and I have tried to cope with it in a reasonable fashion, but they've stretched me to my limit."

A Chill on Parliament Hill

Better late than never, Conservative leader Joe Clark has come out foresquare for bilingualism, even expressing sympathy for French-speaking air controllers, and New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent has withdrawn mysterious allegations of wrongdoing against Jean Marchand. But neither of these belated actions will warm the chilled air settling around Prime Minister Trudeau's beleaguered administration.

The increasingly long line of departed federal cabinet ministers are like notches on a gun butt, the barrel of which is pointed at the Trudeau administration. John Turner, Andre Ouellet, Gerard Pelletier and now Jean Marchand have all succumbed out of frustration or irritation. Marchand's resignation was perhaps fortuitous in that bad health and a peculiar ineptitude as an administrator might have dictated his removal from cabinet in the near future. But leaving as he did, over the controversial issue of bilingualism, fuels new fires for extremists on both sides of the issue. It also means the prime minister is to some degree isolated now, without his two oldest Quebec mentors, Pelletier and Marchand.

Before the vote on capital punishment or the pilots' strike, only 31 per cent of the electorate expressed confidence in the prime minister. Today the percentage might be even lower. While the ad hoc creation of a new commission to investigate bilingual air safety has defused the issue for now, it shows signs of long life. On the heels of Marchand's resignation came word that Quebec air controllers won't co-operate with the commission on air safety and may even challenge its legality. Jules Deschenes, chief justice of the Quebec superior court has even written to Bora Laskin, chief justice of the supreme court of Canada implying that the terms which the government agreed upon to end the strike make it impossible for a judge to conduct the inquiry.

Harbingers of this nature bode ill for an equitable settlement of the issue. In an earlier editorial, the Times stated that Transport Minister Otto Lang had "bent over backwards" to be fair to the striking pilots. It now appears that Lang bent over so far he lost his balance and fell down. Two of the three judges appointed to the commission are western Canadians of English extraction. While this in no way impairs their judgment, it causes suspicion in French Canada. And remember that the commission's recommendations must be unanimous or the pilots won't consider its proposals. The matter of a free vote in parliament on any forthcoming commission proposals is the worst concession. Less than 3,000 persons literally dictated their terms to parliament. Winning a bluff of this nature against Her Majesty's government will not go unnoticed by business and labor groups in Canada. An ugly precedent has been set.

Whatever one's political affiliations, the issue of bilingualism should not be exploited for political advantage by any party. The Trudeau administration will probably be the government of Canada for at least another two years. It deserves a chance to extricate itself from a mess of its own making, if only because no one else is around to carry the nation's sceptre. Canada is fast approaching a crucial crossroads in its history. The government is on its knees. If we continue to beat it over the head on this issue we will all feel the pain.

ROB BULL

How Quebec Sees Crisis

MONTREAL — The rest of the country may have breathed a sigh of relief last week when Transport Minister Otto Lang signed an agreement with some remarkable conditions which put the country's airplanes back in the skies.

Until then, Ottawa's handling of the dispute over the implementation of bilingual air traffic control in the province and the Ottawa area had general support in Quebec.

But the agreement changed all that.

The dispute has been considered here as being more about a racist refusal of some privileged English-Canadians to accept bilingualism than about air safety.

This was the message in the popular crusade which forced the resignation of John Keenan, former lawyer for the Canadian Airline Pilots Association, from his appointment as commissioner to look into the problem of bilingual air control here.

It was also obvious in the statements of some federal Liberal backbenchers from Quebec.

One of them, Serge Joyal, launched a battle with Quebec government support in the courts against Air Canada for its alleged discrimination against French-Canadians.

In the background was Quebec's own wide-reaching Official Language Act, described last spring by Prime Minister Trudeau as "politically stupid." Premier Robert Bourassa returned the compliment with the air agreement.

'Politically Stupid'

The Quebec language law, which in some places is vague and contradictory, has the praiseworthy purpose of promoting the use of French in the province.

It has the unrealistic effect, however, of attempting to limit some basic rights of Canada's linguistic majority in the country's largest city, prevents some Canadian citizens from being integrated into the country's major language group and attempts to limit the employment of people not on their language capability but on their racial and provincial origins.

There is a basic clash in the Quebec law with the philosophy of the federal government's bilingualism policy but the province had been hoping that national crown corporations, including Air Canada, would accept the provincial legislation and put into practice. This possibility, hopefully, is dim.

When Lang acceded to the pilot's demands last week many Quebeckers saw it as a sell-out.

The first indication of the gravity with which some members of the Quebec establishment viewed the affair came last Tuesday when the highly-respected Chief Justice Jules Deschenes of the Quebec superior court requested the immediate intervention of the Canadian Council of Judges to determine if it was appropriate for judges to act as commissioners under the conditions of the agreement between Land and the air controllers and pilots.

He felt the agreement imposed "extraordinary limitations and conditions on the freedom of thought, action and expression of the commissioners," an opinion supported by John Diefenbaker.

Later in the week, Mr. Justice Deschenes was to rule that eight Quebeckers did not have the legal right to send their children to an English-language school where they would learn French as well, because of the provisions of the province's Official Language Act.

Environment Minister Jean Marchand's resignation from the federal cabinet was a bombshell on front pages of the province's papers Dominion Day. Marchand said he had to resign because the agreement included errors so significant he was unable to toe the line of cabinet solidarity.

Marchand is still a popular man here and many observers predict tough times ahead for federal Quebec leader Marc Lalonde now that Marchand feels free to say what he really thinks in caucus and in the House of Commons.

In Quebec City, some Liberal members of the provincial legislature demanded Lang's resignation and the assembly voted unanimously against the agreement.

ROBERT BOURASSA

Fernand Lalonde, the Quebec minister responsible for the province's Official Language Act, started off calling the agreement "imprudent and dangerous." Soon he was describing it as "a gymnastic exercise which is difficult to understand" and by the end of the week he was saying it was "very dangerous."

At about this point, Quebec air controllers started a work-to-rule campaign which pilots flying into the province met with one of their own. The organization representing Quebec controllers and pilots said it would not co-operate with the federal commission on air bilingualism.

Bourassa laid his cards on the table Saturday night at a meeting of young provincial Liberals in the Gaspe town of Matane.

According to press reports here, he said: "We are certainly not against bilingualism across Canada. But our priority is Quebec, because we are the only French language government in North America.

"We are not going to forego this priority," the premier said, "in the hope of gaining more for our minorities in Saskatchewan.

"If the federal government is incapable of making French respected because it has responsibilities towards an English-speaking majority, if it is proven to be politically impossible to make such basic and sensible demands respected as the need for bilingual air traffic control in Quebec, constitutional changes are required."

The premier described the federal government's bilingualism program as being "generous" but not enough for Quebec.

Speaking in his chosen role as racial leader, he said: "Even with a very strong French-Canadian team in Ottawa, you can see what happened. What will things be like in Conferation when our demographic weight is less?"

A serious crisis may be building because of the failure of federal Liberals and their former provincial allies to agree on the nature of a bilingual Canada.

Trudeau is just as committed as Bourassa to protecting and encouraging the growth of French culture in Quebec. Trudeau's vision is, however, a wider one.

Increasing Pressure

Under his leadership, French-Canadians are now playing a greater role in the country's life than ever before. More Canadians are being served in the country's second official language than in the past and all federal political parties have been forced to come to terms with the nation's official minority.

Bourassa, in his flexible attempt to cope with the Parti Quebecois, has decided to fight the battle on Rene Levesque's own terms. The premier's version of sovereignty and association with Canada can, Bourassa feels, be worked out within the terms of Confederation.

Like most Quebeckers, he does not really care too much about what happens to his compatriots outside the province. He may or may not have misjudged the mood of the Canadian nation.

The pressure will be increasing on Trudeau with the federal government's approaching decision on how to cope with the province's Official Language Act as it applies to its own employees and clients here.

It is difficult to see how Trudeau can go much further than the federal Official Languages Act and still have the support of the rest of the country.

But it is high time he started explaining in a little more detail to his own caucus and province what federal bilingualism is all about and what it has accomplished. He should not have to do so alone.

Quebec Intolerance

In your editorial Hemlines of Intolerance in the Times June 29 you seem to have ignored the fact that the level of bilingual intolerance in Quebec is far more intense than in any other part of Canada. Not only is the English language not tolerated, it is being virtually extinguished by legislative acts. So the appearance here of bilingual signs on food items, toilets, etc., is considered by many to be an expensive farce. For the fact remains that French is not necessary for living in any other part of North America and that attempts to proselytize the French culture into western and other parts of Canada seems to most to be an expensive waste of time and effort. There are many other ethnic cultures just as valuable as the English and French in the work force of Canada. They retain their language and culture for the most part and additionally have to learn the language of North America. One cannot expect them to cope with French as well.

As in Quebec, bilingual proficiency for the ordinary person is hard to come by. One can only expect an exclusive minority at university level to acquire this proficiency. The fact that the Trudeau government is now heavily oriented to French and selectively influencing cabinet and civil service appointments in this direction almost to an exclusive level is a good part of the reason for the polarization of the language issue in the recent air safety strike. Coupled with the horrendous Olympic cost, the Sky Shops affair, the hit-and-miss cabinet driver, and the general air of "laissez-aller" in dress, public performance, etc., it is little wonder that people out here want no part of biculturalism or the lopsided bilingualism that this government professes to promote. — H. Evans, 3323 Henderson Road.

Confederation

Confederation! Count it, a witness and a will,
A testament before us, a role for us to fill;
Remembering, reviving, in truth forgetting none
Where unity and wisdom embracing, make us one!

Of Canada's creation, let all of us declare
Our nationhood established, a presence everywhere;
Of moral worth and spirit, of flesh and blood and bone,
Of charity and mercy — a vision of our own!

Thro' fundamental union by parliament proclaimed,
A truth before us always with ideals
unashamed;
From sea to sea — our homeland
where fostered deep and wide, Fraternity and justice with peace and love abide!

That province and by province, by territories, too,
All sharing in our oneness, why we come shining thro';
Our gift to all each other, in trust
across the land,
Where freedom finds a purpose, a way to understand!

So flies our flag an emblem of country, pride and place,
Where we are free together, a people race by race;
Whose ways of life are varied,
democracy holds sway,
Good government a watchword to heed the passing day!

Confederation! Count it, a craving and a cry,
An image and a likeness, of what we are and why;
Of all our vast endeavor, our gateways East and West,
Of what is deep within us in answer to our quest!

A. L. Greig, 1141 Fort Street.

Is the issue air safety or really bilingualism itself?

Safety Appeal

The air controllers and pilots appealing for safety in our skies have seen their words "twisted by rogues to make a trap for fools." Rene Levesque and the federal government have again made the issue one of bilingualism, when this is not the case at all. A captain of Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM) recently explained to me the absolute necessity of all pilots, taking off or landing at international airports, knowing the location of all other aircraft and what they will be doing. They listen carefully to all transmissions between pilots and tower.

Thus the issue is not that one pilot understands an air controller, but that all pilots in the vicinity also understand the exchange and any instructions given. There is no time for translations or misinterpretations, hence the telegraphic air code spoken by all commercial pilots in the international language. There is no pilot of Air France who does not understand this lingua franca of the air, contrary to what has been inferred by some of the propaganda coming out of Ottawa and Quebec. The issue is not concerned with private pilots of light aircraft, flying out of minor airfields.

There may be some of the latter who cannot understand instructions from an air controller in English, but there can be no francophone pilot of any of our major airlines who is not fully at home with it, and who does not use it daily. If charges of racism are to be levied, let them be brought against Leveque, the federal government and their henchmen. They have, deliberately, and for their own ends, stirred up the bilingualism issue and aroused the hatred of the rest of Canada against our Canadian Frenchmen, most of whom are as concerned with air safety as the rest of us. They are despicable men who hope to split this country in the next decade. — T. de Faye, 3001 Foul Bay Road.

Longtime Clients

As longtime clients of Canadian Pacific Airlines we wish to state our present position. We have always elected to fly CP Air, primarily for convenience and safety's sake. We consider the pilots were fully justified in refusing to fly under conditions they considered unsafe. They had nothing to gain personally. We therefore deplore the legal action CP Air is taking against them, for this implies either that CP Air has no faith in their judgment, or that passenger safety is not CP Air's prime concern. We find either premise highly disturbing. Croyez-nous, ce n'est pas la une question de chauvinisme anglosaxon — puisque nous sommes parfaitement bilingues — mais nous sommes plutot attaches a une vie qui nous parait bien douce!

So until the government comes to its senses and sticks to the one-language code, and CP Air decides to back up its pilots' decisions, we will prudently depart via Seattle. Meanwhile we have no further use for our charge account card, which we returned. — Frieda and R. J. Kerfoot, 6244 Rodolph Road.

Trains Needed

During our nine-day air strike the travelling public realized we had a railway system capable of carrying people to almost any part of Canada and although without the speed of air travel, one could arrive at the destination without having to worry as to whether or not the engineer had been instructed to operate the train in the English or French langauge.

At this time our railway ticket offices were hard pressed to handle last minute requests for rail transportation and I suppose many travellers were surprised to find a decrease in the number of trains available. How could this be otherwise when apparently the railways are only used during such emergencies?

Through the lack of passenger traffic it has been rumored that the rail service between Vancouver and Montreal will be curtailed or discontinued. I feel under the circumstances that the government should make an effort to keep this passenger service in operation, remembering during the long postal strike that rail service was again used to carry essential mail and other important commodities which normally would have been handled by our postal services.

I think it is about time that we Canadians took another look at our present railway transportation system. The younger generation may look upon it as out of date in the same way we looked at the old woodburner engine yet lived to see the day of the diesel engine with all its power. It has been said that everything has a beginning and must have an end and speaking for the thousands of men and women who have served the railways so faithfully and now forgotten by the powers to be, would say on their behalf that our rail transportation is not out-of-date but just entering a new phase.

In these troubled times of ours today I would strongly suggest that the present railroaders keep the roadbeds, tracks and equipment in first class condition — someday you might be glad you did. — Larry Kirkham, Secretary, Br. 6 CN Pensioners Association.

The Long Night Of Latin Torture

By JAMES NEILSON
London Observer

BUENOS AIRES — Today in Latin America there are only a handful of countries where individuals can voice their opinions without risking arrest, torture, and sometimes death. This situation varies from country to country. The freedom of speech is reasonably secure in Venezuela, Colombia and Costa Rica. It is totally absent in Uruguay, Chile, and Cuba. In some countries, such as Argentina, Brazil and Mexico, freedom of expression exists to a certain extent, but is permanently threatened by changes in official policies.

As well as being deprived of the right to speak their mind should they desire, most Latin Americans enjoy no protection at all against arbitrary abuses by the police and the security forces. Ideas about habeas corpus are not taken very seriously. In most of the region, moreover, torture is regarded as a normal part of police procedure.

In most states the war against dissent of any kind is conducted openly by the security forces. In Argentina, however, the assault on left-wing intellectuals and others who are strongly opposed to the present government appears to be spearheaded by gangs of vigilantes without any known connection with the government itself. But whether the dissenter is exposed to arbitrary arrest by government forces or kidnapping and murder by vigilantes, the end result is much the same: a climate of terror with every individual holding unorthodox opinions fearing that he or she may be tortured or murdered for daring to speak out.

To make matters worse, the fiercest opposition to the military regimes dominating Latin America usually comes not from democrats but from extreme left-wingers who would like nothing better than to set up totalitarian dictatorships of their own. The number of people in the middle who are concerned for the human rights of everyone, whatever his opinions, appears to be getting smaller.

As far as is known the most flagrant abuses are committed in Chile and Cuba, both of which are ruled by governments determined to stamp out dissent altogether. The crimes of these two governments have been documented by many international bodies, including the Human Rights Commission of the Organization of American States, which is emerging as by far the most effective advocate for tolerance and decency in the region.

Disregard for human rights was the principal theme of the OAS General Assembly held, appropriately enough, in Santiago, Chile, at the beginning of June. The Commission circulated a 191-page report among delegates, who included U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, which accused the Chilean regime of continuing to practice "arbitrary arrests, persecution, and torture" while simultaneously emitting decrees and declarations designed "to tranquilize or confuse" world opinion.

CASTRO

This report had been drawn up in March before General Augusto Pinochet's regime started to release considerable numbers of political prisoners in an effort to appease hostile opinion abroad. And while the assembly was meeting the Chilean government released another batch of 60 prisoners who had evidently been kept ready for the occasion. This ploy did little to persuade delegates from the few remaining democratic countries in Latin America that their hosts were concerned about anything apart from their unsavory reputation.

The OAS Human Rights Commission has also drawn up a report on the inhuman treatment meted out to Cubans whose political views happen to differ from those of Fidel Castro. The report had been put together too late for the assembly, but according to Kissinger, who had managed to get a look at it earlier, "It confirms all the worst fears." The Cubans, like the Chileans, had done their best to obstruct the Commission, but were not able to prevent it from doing its work entirely.

While the Assembly in Chile concentrated on the well-known brutalities committed by the Chilean authorities, it did little to concern itself with the equally appalling behavior of most of the other governments in the region. Should the OAS Human Rights Commission investigate the situation of political prisoners in Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, Brazil, Peru and Argentina, however, it would be almost certain to find enough to fill many more grisly reports.

In Brazil the press is strictly censored and outspoken opponents of the regime are summarily stripped of their political rights. Torture is regularly used to extract "confessions" from people accused of belonging to left-wing terrorist gangs. The tortures applied generally have strong overtones of sexual sadism, and the Brazilians apparently specialize in torturing husbands and wives together. Bad as the Brazilians situation is, there are some gleams of light. From time to time a coureageous judge is willing to act on the accusations of people who say they have been tortued.

And many of the people at the very top of the Brazilian government hierarchy appear to be opposed to torture on principle and would like to eliminate it. Their ability to do so, however, is limited, for in Brazil as elsewhere in Latin America, torture has virtually become an institution, and many policemen and soldiers do not find it exceptional.

The situation in Uruguay is, if anything, even worse than in Brazil. Press censorship is stricter and no pretence that political rights exist is made. According to reports published in Mexico and elsewhere large numbers of Uruguayans have been tortured to death at the hands of the armed forces, and many thousands are in jail for political "offences."

With the ousting of President Juan Maria Bordaberry by the armed forces last month, there are only two constitutionally-elected civilian presidents left in South America — those of Venezuela and Colombia.

Outspoken dissent is hazardous in both Argentina and Guatemala, but the connection between the government and the widespread repression that exists is not clear. In both countries the government claims it is determined to stop such abuses as torture and arbitrary arrests and murder, but in both countries people thought to be left-wing have been kidnapped or murdered at a horrifying rate.

Many people fear that Argentina in particular is moving toward the sort of wholesale oppression that characterized Chile after the fall of Salvador Allende. This is because the government, whatever its intentions, is not proving able—despite the massive firepower at its disposal — to curb the rampaging right-wingers who do what they like with little danger of being arrested. This has led some observers to conclude that the right-wingers either are policemen or soldiers themselves, or enjoy a certain measure of protection from them. The government insists that it is not going to tolerate terrorism of any kind, but nevertheless, the murders of left-wingers, whether Argentines or foreign exiles, show no sign of becoming less frequent.

Tortured AIB Rulings Inflate Anger

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Every time Ottawa mentions its anti-inflation program, it manages to increase the irritation level of the public. With the Budget Papers report on Compensation Aspects of the Anti-Inflation Program, it does it again.

For one thing, the report is hard to understand for anybody who does not have a government trouble-shooter standing at his elbow. For another thing, it asks the reader to take far too much on trust, a commodity not in general supply these anti-inflation days. And for another thing, it leaves out what any wage-earner would want to know.

Consider this for lucidity. A total of 477,000 "workers with initial compensation increases at or below applicable guidelines," with "average percentage guidelines" of 11.2 had "average initial percentage increases" of 9.2 for an "average percentage variance from guidelines" of minus 2.0, while 300,000 "workers with initial compensation increases above applicable guidelines" of 10.6 had "average initial percentage increases" of 16.9, for an "average percentage variance from guidelines" of 6.3.

Do you understand that? We thought we did, for a flashing instant while the government explainer stood at our elbow; but it's gone now.

The irritability introduced by this kind of language is increased when the eye drops to a footnote which says, "Does not include postal workers for whom the Government made a special ruling after a 44-day strike."

Move on. We were told the average percentage guidelines for miners was 10 per cent, for manufacturing workers 0.6 per cent, for transportation and communication workers 9.9 per cent, for teachers 11.6 per cent. Who works out the appropriate average percentage guidelines? Presumably the AIB. On what reasoning? We are not told, except for the broadest general principles. That is asking different workers to take different guidelines on faith. They don't have it.

They have less of it when they notice that miners were allowed to exceed the guidelines judged appropriate for them by 3 per cent, manufacturing workers by 0.5 per cent, transportation and communication workers by 0.4 per cent, and teachers by 12.6 per cent.

And less still when they are told that public sector workers were allowed average increases of 16.5 per cent, while private sector workers were allowed only 13.2 per cent. But then they take the teachers out of the public sector and the public sector is level with the private sector at 13.2 per cent. Yet teachers are public sector workers and why should their large increases be lifted from the picture to make AIB judgments look more equitable than they are?

And what every worker would like to know is never told — the size of the increase in dollars on top of an annual wage in dollars. Always the government sticks to percentages, so that we cannot know if the biggest increases are going to those already well paid, though investigation of individual cases has indicated that they are.

The purpose of the anti-inflation program is to cut the expectations of workers and companies for excessively high wage and price increases. It would have been done more effectively — if it can be done — by a straight wage and price freeze. The endless and — as far as the victims can see — arbitrary picking away of the AIB may eventually stem the expectations, or it may build irritation to the explosion point.

Still Time to Curb Weather Warriors

By DAVID FAIRHALL
Manchester Guaradian

The prospects of controlling the luxuriant growth of world armaments have never looked gloomier. Seen from the International Peace Research Institute's neutral perch in Stockholm, the picture includes the spread of nuclear technology — and hence, in time, nuclear bombs — that can no longer be stopped, a flourishing trade in arms with the "Third World," and failure to consolidate arms control measures like SALT during the past year.

But the Stockholm Institute's survey of 1975 does draw attention to one area of arms control where there is still time. Environmental warfare — which could mean anything from destroying an enemy's crops to upsetting the electrical activity of his brain by low frequency radiation — has its own horrors, but thankfully it is still largely theoretical.

The Russians and the Americans have already discussed a draft convention to control this type of warfare that is far from watertight, but the institute's latest yearbook suggests that a ban is well worth attempting.

It gives a warning that ways of changing the weather or climate, which used to be studied for peaceful purposes, are now being studied as weapons of war:

"The prospect of gross interference with the weather or climate for military purposes is so disturbing to most people that there would be massive support for a ban on geophysical weapons — even more so because, unless banned, these weapons will almost certainly be developed," it writes.

"But certain existing military tactics are so damaging to the environment, and the consequences of their use so out of proportion to any conceivable military need, that their prohibition is much more urgent. Heading the list, as shown by recent warfare, are the use of herbicides and strategic bombing."

Eleven million American bombs and 200 million shells damaged an area totalling half of South Vietnam, the yearbook estimates. Ten per cent of the country was sprayed with herbicides, destroying forest cover, food plants and crops. Armoured tractors bulldozed their way through a million hectares of forest, plus thousands more of rubber plantation, orchard and field.

But this is simple stuff compared with the techniques of environmental manipulation the scientists are now talking about. The Russians' interest in seeking some sort of international control seems to have been prompted by their own success in suppressing the hailstorms that damage many of their crops.

Four million hectares of agricultural land are said to be protected by radar controlled guns and missiles which fire into the clouds to prevent the formation of large hailstones, thus reducing damage by a factor of four or five.

The benefits of being able to damp down hurricanes or divert them out to sea are obvious enough to a country like the United States, whose coastline is reguarly hit by them. But a storm which merely changes direction may devastate someone else.

If successful techniques are developed for modifying the climate, directing the ocean currents, precipitating earthquakes and so on, the innocent reasoning which prompted the original research could acquire sinister overtones. Countries afflicted by drought, floods, or avalanches might suspect their neighbors.

The connection sounds less fanciful when one hears scientists discussing the possibility of using a nuclear explosion to blast a "hole" in the protective ozone layer above an enemy's territory, so as to subject him to the intense ultraviolet radiation that inhibits plant growth and causes skin cancer.

Still more exotic is the possibility of using what is known as "the ionosphere-earth wave guide" to propagate very low-frequency radiation so as to upset the electrical activity of the human brain. The Stockholm yearbook admits that this is a highly speculative field, but claims that "it may become hypothetically possible to impair the performance of a large group of people in selected regions."

Nothing, it seems is going to stop the research. But a convention which established some kind of definition for environmental warfare, and then banned it, would be worth having.

The Spongeability Test

russell baker

Disaster!

Spilled my coffee. It is spreading across the table, will soon arrive at the lap. The hostess is alarmed. Guests are in the first phase of motion. My mind is moving faster than the speed of light. Faster than the eye can blink, it winnows the possibilities.

Yes, yes. I could race to the kitchen, find paper towels. Could demonstrate for the table. "See how easily this paper towel blots nasty, hard-to-control liquid." Afterwards, perhaps, I could entertain them by doing the spongeability test. This would take some fast movement. I'd have to race home, get my own paper towels with their superior spongeability, race back, get two glasses of water from the hostess's kitchen, dip her paper towel in one, dip my superior paper towel in the second, show everyone how my towel absorbs twice as much water.

Would everybody cry, "Wow!" like those wretched truck drivers on television? Poor devils! Probably want to talk about baseball while that maniacal waitress browbeats them into watching her play with paper towels. Bad move here. Very bad move. The hostess would be humiliated if everybody said, "Wow!" to my paper towel and, "Phooey!" to hers. Definitely wouldn't be invited back.

Must act! Must act! What about toilet paper? Saw powder room just off center hall. Possibility: Dash to powder room, dash back with roll of toilet paper, use as blotter if it's soft enough. Question: Is toilet paper in this house really sufficiently soft to do job?

Very doubtful. Have studied host closely. Definitely not the sort of man to sit around with wife feeling toilet paper to make sure they buy the kind that's twice as soft. And why should they? Don't do it myself. Careless, careless. Watching young people on television last night comparing toilet paper for softness left me feeling careless.

Had meant to discuss this with wife. "Listen," I'd meant to say to her, "we've got to work harder at our consuming. We've got to spend more of our time sitting around the kitchen table comparing the relative softness of things like toilet paper."

Why hadn't I? If we had made the softness test and bought accordingly, and this dinner had been at our house tonight, and I'd spilled the coffee, I could rush to the powder room, seize toilet paper and blot coffee with assurance it could do the job.

No! Bad idea! Toilet paper at dinner table in very bad taste. Still, it's not bad taste to have handsome young couple feeling toilet paper on television. Why so bad to mop coffee with it at dinner table? Thirty-seven million people including children watch television. Just eight adults at dinner table.

Coffee advancing at alarming pace. Terrible stain, if it were only orange juice! Does bogus orange juice make as bad a mess on a table cloth as fresh orange juice? Reminds me of that young couple on television last night tasting bogus orange juice. Somebody had told them it tasted "closer to fresh" than their regular bogus orange juice, but they said they wouldn't say it tasted "closer to fresh" unless it really did taste "closer to fresh," after which both tasted the stuff and said, "Closer to fresh."

Why are so many young couples sitting around feeling toilet paper and tasting bogus orange juice? Must be a new thing young people do instead of dancing. No wonder the birthrate is falling. Everybody's so busy consuming. Still, if it's what young people are up to, I better start doing it. The American way. Young is beautiful. Even feeling toilet paper.

Oops! First wave of coffee arriving at lap. Must act. Act! Act! Act! Excellent idea there for sitting around kitchen table with wife some evening soon. We are both feeling coffee splashes that have just spilled on the table. Coffee is running toward lap. "Hello there," I say. "We are both testing this hot coffee to see if it burns our laps twice as painfully as our regular spilled coffee."

What do young couples get out of doing things like that? I'd almost rather watch television. Or possibly, we could both sit around the kitchen table feeling television commercials. "Hello there," I say. "We are both testing this television commercial to see if it's twice as . . ."

YEE-OW!

Here comes the first wave! Act, man! Act! Without a moment's hesitation, I leap back from the table, breaking a leg on the hostess's Queen Anne chair and letting the coffee cascade onto her Oriental rug. Firmly, I mop it with my pocket handkerchief while sneakily feeling the rug with my free hand.

"Hello there," I say. "This rug has twice as much spongeability as my regular paper towel."

A little joke, you see, to help break the social tension. Nobody gets it but me.

Can Afton Be Controlled?

KAMLOOPS (CP) — If the Afton mine and smelter is allowed to operate under present pollution permits, the provincial pollution control branch might lose control of it, a Pollution Control Board appeal was told Monday.

The real danger is that once the plant has started up, the director of the branch might not be able to close it, said counsel for nine environmental groups appealing the pollution permit.

Five permits were issued to allow the company to discharge solid wastes, domestic sewage, operate a tailings pond and discharge air pollutants from a smelter and mill about eight miles west of here.

"If the plant is allowed to go ahead, once the damage is done it will be too late to close it," Hunter said.

He said he would attempt to show the pollution control branch was either misled or not informed of all facts when the permits were issued.

John Emslie of Vancouver, a federal meteorologist, said he made extensive studies of air movement in the Thompson River valley at Kamloops during 1969 and 1970.

He said emissions from the Afton site could be carried at ground level to the edge of the valley and down into it.

Dr. Richard Beamish, a federal fisheries biologist from Nanaimo, said heavy metals such as those Afton is being allowed to emit in heavy concentrations are toxic to fish.

The mine primarily produces copper but lead, zinc, cadmium and arsenic are released during the smelting process.

The number of deaths due to lung cancer is highest among men who work in a copper-arsenic smelter in Tacoma, said Dr. Samuel Milham of the Washington State Health Department.

Chronic exposure to low doses of arsenic can be linked to a high incidence of lung cancer, he said.

A study of school children living near the Tacoma smelter showed high traces of arsenic in their hair and urine. Arsenic levels dropped as tests were conducted further from the smelter.

Butler said the results of the study would be different if the Tacoma smelter released half a ton of arsenic a year instead of more than 200 tons a year.

Under terms of Afton's pollution permit it, it would release about 500 pounds of arsenic a year, the board was told.

Louis Lindholm of Victoria, counsel for the pollution control branch, told Dr. Milham he doubted there was a parlei between the two smelters.

"What you are pointing out is the horrendous problem resulting from the worst arsenic processing plant on earth," he said. "You aren't suggesting if Afton follows pollutuon permit guidelines the same thing could happen here?"

Dr. Milham agreed arsenic isn't a problem at Afton but is something that will build up in the soil.

Station Bars Reinstated Workers

PRINCE ALBERT (CP)—Fourteen of 21 reinstated CKBI employees fired Dec. 2, 1974, tried to return to their jobs Monday but were refused entry, Gus Gerecke, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which represents the workers, said.

The Supreme Court of Canada last week uphled a reinstatement order issued by the Labor Relations Board Feb. 19, 1975, stating that the 21 workers who picketed the local radio and television station to protest lagging contract negotiations were to return to work.

The ruling, a dismissal of a stay on the board's reinstatement order, ended a 19-month battle between the station and the union.

Gerecke said the union had contacted the station's lawyer and station manager E. A. Rawlinson directly to arrange an orderly return to work but were told the station did not have to deal with the union in the matter of employees returning to work.

Gerecke said some of the employees received word from CKBI instructing them to return to work at certain dates at certain times.

One person was told to report July 2, and when she could not return until Monday, was suspended without pay until Friday.

Another person who reported at the specified time was given a list of unreasonable conditions to follow, Gerecke said.

"For example, she was told to stay at her workplace and she could only have access to the washroom and no other part of the building."

She told the station manager she could not return to work under those conditions.

FRENCH LANGUAGE TV ON AIR IN SEPTEMBER

VANCOUVER (CP)—CBUFT, Vancouver's new French-language television station, plans to start broadcasting in two months, station spokesman Jacques Baillout said Monday.

Baillout said CBUFT, which will broadcast more than 14 hours a day, is aiming at a start-up in the first two weeks of September. A test pattern now is being broadcast and technicians are working on completion of the station's studios.

The station will broadcast on an ultra high frequency channel which will also be carried on cable.

CBUFT was awarded its broadcasting licence by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission on May 28.

Salmon Netters Accept Terms

VANCOUVER (CP)—The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union announced Monday that its salmon net fishermen segment has voted 94 per cent in favor of accepting terms of a one-year contract recommended by the union negotiating committee.

Acceptance of the offer means that contracts covering the three segments of the union bargaining — fishermen, tendermen and shoreworkers—now have been ratified.

Shoreworkers voted last week 64.4 per cent and tendermen voted 78 per cent in favor of accepting new contracts.

The fishermen's contract provides minimum prices of 70 cents a pound for sockeye, up eight cents from 1975; 51 cents for coho, up six cents; 30 cents for pinks, up six cents; and 36 cents for chums, up six cents.

The price paid for large red spring has been increased to 88 cents a pound from 68 and the price for jack springs has been increased to 50 cents a fish from 40 cents.

The agreement also calls for the Fisheries Association of British Columbia, which represents the companies involved in the agreement, to contribute six-tenths of a cent a pound to the fishermen's welfare fund on all net salmon caught, an increase of two-tenths of a cent from 1975.

The Boss' Home Picketed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Upholsterers International Union on strike at Skyway Luggage Co. since April 9 picketed a Burnaby truck rental firm while supporters of the union picketed the home of the Skyway general manager during the weekend.

Union members set up an around-the-clock picket line at Ryder Truck Rental Ltd. because, they said, the truck was carrying Skyway goods which have been declared "hot" by the British Columbia Federation of Labor.

About 20 members of the Skyway strikers' support committee picketed the home of Skyway general manager Ray Kingston for two hours, carrying signs which read "Skyway is Kingston's penitentiary for the workers."

The union is demanding a $3.50 hourly increase over two years while the U.S.-owned company has offered 70 cents over three years.

Japanese Families 'Plug In' to World

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese are preparing for what architect Kenzo Tange calls the world's second industrial revolution.

He defines this as a revolution created by electronic information and communications techniques in which man extends the functions of his nerve system to the world around him.

The Japanese government has already launched experiments to test the idea of the "wired city" as the nerve system of future societies. The experiments, a development of cable television, are to be evaluated in 1979.

In the wired city, comprehensive news, information, business, educational, social, entertainment and computer services going far beyond what is provided by the mass media, would become available to all citizens, in households, offices and community centres.

Students at home would be able to communicate with their teachers through a two-way television classroom, housewives would view the day's shopping bargains and place their orders from the kitchen and families might confirm travel bookings from their living rooms.

Voters might cast ballots at the touch of a button from their armchairs and a central computer would read hydro and water meters and send out bills.

Authorities would be able to flash public warnings and announcements on home screens. Households would be linked by fire and burglar alarms to the local police and fire stations. Even the possibility of medical consultation through television is foreseen. News, traffic and weather would be among services available when required through television sets with printout facilities.

Researchers would have access to central data banks. Home viewers would be able to "key" into old movies, educational films and other material of their choice from a public video library.

This vision of the future — with its risks of a "Big Brother" central authority encroaching on the private lives of individuals comes closer to reality with the Tama coaxial cable information system launched in Tama new town, 30 miles northwest of Tokyo.

The system links about 300 homes to a variety of services piped from the town's community television centre. It also relays Tokyo's seven television channels.

Services include home television lessons, delivery of facsimile newspapers, community announcements and news, sports, weather and shopping information.

After four months, one of the test households, Nasao Mamiya and his wife, both aged 45, and their daughters Reiko, 14, and Chicharu, 12, agree they are heartily in favor of the wired city. It gives them a feeling of reassurance, they say.

At the sound of a passing fire engine's siren, Mamiya's first reaction was to press a button on the keyboard under his television set. A message flashed across the screen saying a fire had broken out about half a mile away. Another message over the regular morning television program told the Mamiyas the fire was under control and that no one had been hurt.

"Before, when we heard a siren going, we didn't know what it meant," Mamiya said.

Meat Packers Reach Accord

TORONTO — The Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union has negotiated a new one-year agreement with Canada Packers Ltd. and Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., both of Toronto, covering about 7,800 workers in meat-packing plants across Canada.

The terms, which were reached in less than five weeks of bargaining and replace a previous two-year agreement that expired last May 31, are to be submitted Thursday to union members for ratification.

Details of the agreement were withheld pending its submission to the union membership.

HOTEL PICKETED AFTER FIRINGS

DUNCAN — Some residents and visitors are honoring an information picket line around the Tzouhalem Hotel since Saturday, but management does not intend to re-instate two employees fired Friday.

Hotel owner Wayne Hachey said business has been affected by the pickets, but the two employees were fired for incompetence and will not be re-hired.

The pickets, set up Saturday by 15 employees represented by Local 835 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Union, is scheduled to remain until union demands are met, said shop steward Cec Phillips.

The dispute arose Friday when three employees working in the beer parlor received pay cheques with a deduction of $182.70 for a cash shortage in the beer parlor the preceding week.

Hachey said that two of the employees were fired after they would not agree to the deduction.

Hotel facilities are being maintained by management staff.

Strike Ended

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Mario Vargas, Bolivian labor minister, said Monday that the country's tin miners have ended their strike at all but two of the most important mines. An estimated 50,000 miners went on strike last June 9 to demand a 100-percent increase in monthly pay, estimated by union officials to average $62.

Rodriguez Hearing Opens

DUNCAN (CP) — Preliminary hearing into charges of murder punishable by life imprisonment against a 26-year-old U.S. man charged in connection with a double slaying last October, began Monday.

Charged is James Rodriguez Melendez, formerly a resident here who was extradited from the United States last March.

Rodriguez was charged after the bodies of James Oldfield, 29, and Pamela Jones, 22, both of Duncan, were found Nov. 16, 1975, near a municipal dump.

Five days have been set aside for the hearing, at Duncan provincial court, and as many as 40 witnesses are expected to testify.

At the request of defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Judge Lance Heard granted a ban on publication of the proceedings.

Dr. Hardwick said Ron Farris, superintendent of communications, will head the committee.

He said the educators will be holding meetings during the next two months and will prepare a working paper as the basis for public discussion in the fall.

Dr. Hardwick said the committee's recommendations will be on continuing and community education policy in relation to programs, finance and administration.

Represenatives from the University of B.C., the University of Victoria and Okanagan College have been named co-ordinators of sub-committees for the educations study.

A COMPACT COMPARISON.

Datsun F-10 takes on the competition.

When it comes to standard features, Datsun sets the standard, and the new front-wheel drive F-10 has more built-in value than nearly any other compact you can think of.
To prove it, we're comparing the Datsun F-10 directly with six of the most popular compacts.
We think the facts will persuade you that the F-10 should be your next car.

Datsun F-10 Sedan vs. Chevette.

As standard equipment, the Datsun F-10 comes with front-wheel drive, a rear window defogger, a heavy duty 60 amp battery, swing-out rear windows, tinted glass all around, radial tires, fully independent suspension, power-assisted front disc brakes, room for four, and a choice of three models — Sedan, Hatchback and Wagon. None of these are standard on the Chevette; in fact, even a rear seat is an extra-cost option on the lowest priced Chevette. And even with all this standard equipment, the new F-10 Sedan costs only $3770*.

Datsun F-10 Sedan only $3770*

Datsun F-10 Wagon vs. Honda Wagon.

Both the Datsun and the Honda Wagons have front-wheel drive, reclining front bucket seats and fold-down rear seats. But the F-10 also has rustproof fender liners, advanced anti-corrosion treatments, a heavy duty 60 amp battery and a longer wheelbase for more load space and better stability. The F-10 Wagon also gets 10% better gas mileage than the Honda. One of the nicest standard features of the F-10 Wagon, is its price . . . only $3995,* or about $100 less than the Honda.†

Datsun F-10 Hatchback vs. VW Rabbit Deluxe.

Both the VW Rabbit and the Datsun F-10 have front-wheel drive, a rear window defogger and radial tires. But the F-10 doesn't stop there. Its standard equipment includes a five speed gear shift, tinted glass all around, an AM/FM radio, bumper overriders and a competition steering wheel. The F-10 Hatchback gets better gas mileage and also costs $200 less than the Rabbit.†

Datsun F-10 Sedan vs. Vega Sedan.

Every F-10 Sedan comes with front-wheel drive, reclining bucket seats, full tinted glass, rack-and-pinion steering, rear window defogger, radial tires and fully independent suspension None of these are standard on the Vega Sedan. The F-10 also beats the Vega in gas mileage, getting up to 40 m.p.g. in combined city/highway driving.

Datsun F-10 Wagon vs. Pinto Wagon.

The Datsun F-10 comes with front-wheel drive, rustproof fender liners, whitewall tires, a rear window defogger, tinted glass all around, reclining bucket seats, a heavy duty 60 amp battery, and power-assisted front disc brakes. The Pinto Wagon offers none of these as standard equipment. The F-10 also gets better gas mileage than Pinto with up to 40 m.p.g. in combined city/highway driving.

Datsun vs. high gas prices.

Datsun's F-10 rally-proven overhead valve engine gets up to 40 m.p.g. in combined city/highway driving, according to 1976 E.P.A. tests. There aren't many cars on the road today that offer such great economy, with real dollar savings every time you fill up. And as the other comparisons show, not many cars compare with the F-10's built-in value: value that's backed with advanced engineering, rugged construction and a nation-wide parts and service dealer network.

 Based on results of 1976 E.P.A. tests which show that the Datsun F-10 gets 40 m.p.g. in combined city/highway driving, 35 m.p.g. in the city and 49 m.p.g. on the highway. Your mileage will vary depending on how you drive.

Rolling Barges Beating Container Popularity

VANCOUVER (CP) — Roll-on, roll-off (Ro-Ro) barges are the best boat in the shipping industry because containers have not achieved the savings predicted by their advocates, a city shipping executive has told the Canadian Transportation Research Forum.

Jack Eyre, president of Genstar Marine Ltd., said his company will soon operate six Ro-Ro barges in a regular service between Marseilles and a small Saudi Arabian port on the Red Sea.

"Container ship operators have been caught in a competitive jungle, with too many containers, too many ships and too little cargo," said Eyre.

"A Ro-Ro terminal need not be expensive, any bit of jungle shoreline offers potential."

Eyre said there now is a swing towards private cargo terminals to escape from the high costs and confusion found in amost every conventional port.

"Too many public ports are in the wrong place, equipped with too much hardware of the wrong kind."

Graham Kedgley, president of Neptune Terminals Ltd., said the National Harbors Board (NHB) seems determined to force the bulk-loading terminals out of the North Vancouver port by raising the leases to a point where they can no longer operate.

He said his company pays $600,000 a year in taxes to North Vancouver city, a doubling of rates in six years.

Kedgley was critical of proposals to build further bulk terminals in the Vancouver area.

"More terminals would be a very bad dream, and you'd have a lot of bankrupt companies."

He said that coal is the only bulk commodity other than wheat which has a terminal capacity shortfall, with an anticipated annual export figure of 15 million tons.

K. D. Sarsons, president of C S P Foods Ltd., said grain exports through Vancouver could double to 15 million tons in the late 1980s.

Some Auto Workers Get Special Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. labor department has approved special unemployment benefits for 22,300 workers at eight Ford Motor Co. parts plants in Ohio and Michigan who lost their jobs because of increased competition from imported cars and parts.

But the department rejected applications covering another 26,900 Ford workers at other plants in Ohio, Michigan and five other states.

The ruling in favor of the Ohio and Michigan workers was the largest in the two-year history of the Trade Act, under which U.S. workers losing their jobs because of imports are eligible for additional weekly unemployment benefits.

Since last December, the labor department has been considering requests from the United Auto Workers Union on behalf of 78,000 employees of the big U.S. auto makers, granting some and denying others.

The special federal benefits include cheques for up to 70 per cent of a worker's average weekly wage for 52 weeks, retraining and job placement services.

must have been laid off after

To be eligible, the employee Nov. 18, 1973, and before Oct. 1, 1975.

A New Appreciation For Canadian Gymnasts

The 1976 Canadian Gymnastics championships are history, and Victoria actually did itself proud with the welcome it accorded these finely-tuned young athletes on the weekend. The competition was highly interesting, even intense at times, in all its complexities, and undoubtedly the many Victorians who attended the three-day meet now have a better understanding and a deeper sense of appreciation of the exceptional talents of the competitors in what must rank as a tremendously demanding sport.

Naturally, most eyes were on Victoria's own Philip Delesalle who emerged with the national men's championship; and which is a fitting climax for the time being for the 17-year-old youngster who is a model of dedication and perseverance and will represent this city at the Olympics in Montreal later this month.

Philip won the championship in fine style by coming from third place after the compulsories to defeat the 1975 champion Masaaki Naosaki of Toronto; and, if he was outmedalled in the individual events on Saturday by yet another Olympic team member, Keith Carter of Winnipeg, that only serves to show the closeness and intensity of the competition at this level.

Philip's life-style, at least four or five hours practice each day, has been outlined here before as he has been growing up from that young lad who thrilled a visiting Chinese gymnastic team in Vancouver when he was just 14. For that effort he was carried off the floor by the visitors in a rare show of international sportsmanship.

Philip was only 14, too, when he competed in his first Canadian and the only time, believe it, as a junior. He was first all-around, won four golds, two silvers and a bronze on that occasion.

His next Canadian was in 1975 where, as a senior at 16, he was second all around and took three golds, two silvers and a bronze in the individual events. Now there is what is left of this year, the national title behind him and the Olympics and his 18th birthday just ahead.

In between, of course, there have been several other highlights, far too numerous to recount in detail. Still, as in the case of all champions, there have been some notable firsts.

Philip, just this year, in April in fact, hit a high point when he competed in Moscow and took a fourth place on the pommel horse and also a fourth on the horizontal bar and this was against some of the premier gymnasts in the world. He followed that performance with a silver-medal showing on the pommel horse and the high bar in Riga.

And, as it is a known fact that Communist countries rarely send a boy to do a man's job in international sports competition of any kind, this Canadian boy did better than all right in showing them that if he's not yet in world gold medal class, he's closing and closing fast.

That the pommel horse is Philip's best bet for a medal at Montreal is borne out by his past performances.

In the Canadian here he scored the highest points of the championship with his 9.70 on Friday. In May, in the Olympic qualification meet in Weisbaden, West Germany, where 72 athletes from 12 countries were competing, he earned a silver medal; in Budapest, Hungary, in the second Olympic qualification meet, he also got a silver medal on the side horse and, in the initial qualification tournament in Canada, he won a gold and was second all around.

And there's one more credit that must rank as something special. In November of 1975 in what is called a "milk meet" where only gymnast per country is allowed to compete, Philip placed first on the pommel horse and seventh all around. This was at Maple Leaf Gardens.

This, though, is only a small part of the history that Philip will take with him to Montreal.

It's a great record for a youngster, but there will be others there with equally impressive standards. And the simple hope here is that Philip, under the tutlage of his greatest admirer and confidante, Olympic coach John Herb, can do well.

Victoria asks no more, but will gladly accept it. For both Philip's and John's sake.

It's Welcome To Montreal

Lights out welcome will be remembered by Australian steeplechaser Peter Larkins. He receives attention after fainting during Monday's welcoming ceremonies for Australian Olympic team in Montreal. See story page 14. (CP Wirephoto)

Caudwell, Price Share Spotlight

There were almost two winners at Western Speedway Monday night.

Jim Caudwell won the super-stock featured 35-lap main event with Bill Price second and Orton Ker third; while Price, with his second-place finish plus a first in the trophy dash moved to the front in the super-stocks points championship.

Price now has 786 points.

Former leader Bob Collins had the fastest time of 19:03 in the trials but developed head problems on his 1959 Thunderbird and was unable to compete. Collins has 710 points.

For Caudwell it was his second super-stock main event victory of the year and also his career. He won his first earlier this year. Caudwell led for the first nine laps before Price took over for the next 13. Caudwell then regained the lead for the rest of the race.

Caudwell also won the fast heat with Price second.

Tony Oxley was the winner in the first heat. Only five of the 11 starters finished. The race was stopped four times by red flags. Actually, Ernie Schoor finished first but was disqualified for illegal tires.

Mike Tuck replaced regular driver Gordie Hildebrandt at the wheel of his own car to win the 15-lap hobby-stock feature. Ray Birtwhistle was second.

Hobby-stocks points leader Bill Hitchcox was sidelined twice by Warner Johnstone in the main event and Johnstone was blackflagged after the second incident.

Protest Time For Softball

It's protest time in area softball. There were only two games in the area Monday night and both ended in dispute.

At Sanscha Park, Sidney, Harvey's Sporting Good defeated Sidney Hotel 5-2; but the hotelmen protested on the grounds that the umpire had allowed a run to score on an inning-ending double play.

Brian Vanderkratch got the victory for Harvey's while Arv Hawkins and Terry Nunn hit home runs.

At Hyacinth Park MacDonalds Furniture Juniors protested a 3-0 Hygrade Radio playoff victory charging that Hygrade used an ineligible player. Hygrade held a 3-0 lead in the seventh inning when their coach substituted a player who had played only two league games.

Senior women's rules state a player must have competed in three season games but officials were uncertain if the same rule applied to juniors.

Yet to be resolved as well is a Sidney Men's League protest by Travelodge over KOA's 4-3 victory Sunday.

Hobbs Upsets Net Seedings

Some of the seeded players didn't get much respect in the opening day's play of the Pacific Regional junior tennis championships in Victoria Monday night.

Victoria's Art Hobbs pulled the biggest shocker when he upset third-seeded Tony Schiwaci of Hawaii 6-4, 2-6, 7-6, in the under-18 singles. Earlier Hobbs had defeated Doug Halliday of Vancouver 5-7, 6-0, 6-2. Hobbs advances to the quarter-finals where he meets another upsetter, David Trendall of Phoenix.

Trendall upset seventh-seed Mike Sayce of Vancouver.

Victoria's Scott Braley won two matches and meets top-seed Steve Volrich today.

Three city players, Brenda Cameron, Nina Bland and Lori Barlow advanced to the semi-finals of the girls under-18 division. Gayle Dobson of Vancouver, who meets Miss Bland, is the other semi-finalist.

Top-seed Jennifer Bland is in the semi-finals of the under - 16 section, Andrie Levey is in the quarter-finals and Val Brice has advanced to the semis of the girls under-14 division.

Cook Monday night won his fourth game of the season as he tossed a five hitter in orge Hotel's 3-1 victory over Kubiceks at Lambrick Park.

Victory moved Gorge Hotel one game ahead of second-place Greaves Movers. Kubiceks are third, two games behind the leaders.

Garnet Moen had two hits in four trips for the winners and scored the winning run on two-run single by Bob Mabee in the sixth inning.

On Sunday a picked team from the Senior League defeated Vancouver Puccinis at Capilana Stadium in Vancouver 10-3 and 10-5. Rick Mark drove in five runs in the first game for Victoria and Moen had three hits and drove in two in the second. Danny Rogers had a three-run homer in the second.

Johnson Selects The Bird

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie sensation Mark (The Bird) Fidrych and five-time 20-game winner Catfish Hunter head the American League's nine-man all-star pitching staff, announced today by Boston Red Sox manager Darrell Johnson.

Johnson, manager of the American Leaguers for the 47th all-star game July 13, at Philadelphia, hopes his staff of five starters and four relievers can reverse the trend that has carried the National Leaguers to victory in 12 of the last 13 midseason games, including last year's 6-3 triumph.

Four of the nine hurlers are all-stars for the first time, including Fidrych, the exciting non-comformist of Detroit Tigers, whose crowd-pleasing antics include talking to the ball and getting down on his hands and knees to smooth out the pitching mound.

He leads the regular American League pitchers with a 1.85 earned-run average and has a 9-1 record. The other all-star newcomers are strikeout leader Frank Tanana of California Angels, Bill Travers of Milwaukee Brewers and relief ace Dave LaRoche of Cleveland Indians.

Completing the staff are Boston's Luis Tiant, selected for the third time, Oakland's Rollie Fingers, also for the third time, and second-timers Rich Gossage of Chicago White Sox and Sparky Lyle of New York Yankees.

McDonalds Seek To Stretch Lead

Victoria McDonalds get a chance to stretch their lead in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League when they host Coquitlam J-Hawks at the Esquimalt Sports Centre tonight. Game time is 8 p.m.

McDonalds leads second-place Burnaby by three points. Coquitlam is only three points out of last place and need a win in their bid for a playoff spot.

Another interesting aspect of the game could be the charge that two members of the Bakers are making in the league scoring race.

Kevin Alexander of McDonalds leads with 153 points and with 10 games to play appears to stand an excellent chance of breaking the Canadian junior lacrosse scoring mark of 207 points he set last year. Bob Cool of McDonalds is second with 124 points.

New Zealand Players Have Busy Schedule

Members of the Surfside Ramblers softball club of New Zealand will be a busy bunch when they visit this area next week.

Scheduled to arrive Sunday, the Auckland players will be guests of the Sidney Men's Softball Association in a golf tournament Monday at Glen Meadows; will meet Victoria Bates of the Pacific Coast Fastball League in a double-header Tuesday evening at Royal Athletic Park; will play the Sidney All-Stars Wednesday and will take part in a fishing derby Thursday before departing Friday, July 16, for the Mr. Sport softball tournament in New Westminster.

Jim Wilson of the Sidney association is hoping to locate six additional billets for the visitors. Praising support of Sidney residents, Wilson said he hoped to finalize billeting arrangements before the party of 34 arrives from Auckland.

Wilson, who can be reached at 652-2366, also needs two volunteers with boats for the Thursday fishing derby in Sidney Spit waters.

Toronto's Goalkeeper Enjoys Shutout Touch

By The Canadian Press

Goalkeeper Paolo Cimpiel recorded his ninth shoutout in 15 games Monday night as Toronto Metros-Croatia defeated Boston Minutemen 1-0 in a North American Soccer League Game.

Cimpiel held the Minutemen scoreless in regulation time and the 15-minute overtime period while team-mates Iviar Ferreira, Mladen Cukon and Ted Polack each scored on a penalty kicks to give Toronto the victory.

NASL rules say that if a game ends scoreless the team that scores the most penalty kicks is awarded a 1-0 victory.

In the only other NASL game Monday, Los Angeles Aztecs edged Portland Timbers 2-1 on goals by Ron Davies and John Mason.

Brentwood Rowers Win

Brentwood College rowers captured two events in the St. Catharines Rowing Club Invitational Regatta at St. Catharines, Ont., Sunday.

The coxed fours of the school at Mill Bay won its event by three lengths and youth pairs scored an easy win taking that event by 100 metres.

Brentwood will be represented in the Canadian youth trials at St. Catharines this weekend with crews in the eights, coxless four and coxed pairs. Winning crews will compete in the World Youth rowing championships in Austria next month.

Als Edge Riders

OTTAWA (CP) — An eight-yard pass to receiver Brock Aynsley from rookie quarterback Joe Barnes boosted Montreal Alouettes to a 26-22 win over Ottawa Rough Riders in a closely fought Canadian Football League exhibition game Monday.

Aynsley's score came at 10:35 of the fourth quarter and was set up by halfback Glen Leach's recovery of an Ottawa fumble on a punt return, giving Montreal first down on the Ottawa 18-yard line.

A holding penalty moved the ball to the eight from where Barnes found Ainsley wide open in the left corner of the end zone.

The Alouettes got two touchdowns from running back Ian Mofford and one from tight end Peter Dalla Riva. Don Sweet kicked two converts while Barnes failed on two-point conversion attempts on the other touchdowns.

Ottawa scoring was led by Gerry Organ, who kicked five field goals and converted a touchdown by wide receiver Moody Jackson in the second quarter.

A Short-Course Look At Happenings in Golf

FIRST: The field moved off the first tee this morning in the British Columbia junior tournament at Vancouver Golf Club, and you have to be impressed with the entry from Vancouver Island. The Island accounted for 39 of the 169 starters, and that strikes a good note for offshore development. And you have to look for local representation on the interprovincial team because this week's top 20 and ties come back to Uplands and Colwood the July 17-18 weekend for the final team-determining rounds.

SECOND: Big Mike Kolb came up with the best round of his career when he scored a four-under-par 66 at Colwood to win the annual Hotel-Motel tournament last week, but it cost him money. It cost him $8 for participating in a friendly four-ball. Mike's score was one stroke better than the official record off the championship tees, and it equalled the unofficial mark. It was a good day for big guys. Another, Ted Balderson of the Empress Hotel, was the low net winner.

THIRD: A tournament is a tournament, and I can't understand why officials behind the Cedar Hill and Cowichan Opens insist on providing pro scores separately from those of the amateurs. That, plus the fact they ignore each day's totals in the 36-hole tournaments, makes it difficult to obtain a proper and correct leaders' list. Actually, fellas, it's all quite simple.

FOURTH: Alex McCabe had a good thing going but ran out of daylight. The Oak Bay member, who plays to an eight handicap, went out one afternoon with pro Paul Trapp and scored a two-over-par 72. A few hours later, George Bigelow invited Alex out for a few more holes. McCabe played the first nine holes in four-under 29, was two under after 13 holes but then ran out of daylight.

FIFTH: Among the district pros heading for Winnipeg this week and the annual CPGA tournament are Bill Wakeham, Bob Hogarth, Don Billsborough, and John Morgan. As a tour-card holder, rookie pro Bob Beauchemin can make it through a qualifying round.

SIXTH: Bob Cox, finishing with an eight-under 138, finished four shots ahead of Jay Paukkunen to win top money in the Kamloops Open. Former Victorian Dick Munn, one under par for the distance, finished in a tie for third.

SEVENTH: Mike Milligan, scoring 80-83—163, edged Dave Kerr, 79-85—164, to win the Colwood junior championship. Kerr is son of Lawrie, several-times winner of the Colwood and city championships.

EIGHTH: Hockey great Bobby Orr is "quite anxious" to participate in the second annual Celebrity tournament at Uplands on July 25. Because of duty at his summer hockey school in Ontario, his appearance in Victoria may be held back as a spur-of-the-moment thing. Heavy on hockey players, the tournament will benefit the B.C. Heart Foundation.

NINTH: For the record, Seattle GC dfeuted Victoria GC in a continuation of one of North America's oldest inter-club competitions.

No Voodoo in Hooton's Hoodoo

By the Associated Press

Burt Hooton's supernatural hold on Philadelphia Phillies would seem to be a witch doctor's delight, but Dave Cash has an earthly explanation for it.

"The big secret is his ability to stay ahead on the count against us," says the Phillies' second baseman.

Keeping one pitch—and one step—ahead of Philadelphia has been Hooton's forte. The Los Angeles Dodger right-hander has beaten the Phillies seven consecutive times since 1974 — including Monday night's 6-0 National League beauty.

"He threw strikes," said Cash after bowing to Hooton's two-hitter. "We hit the ball hard but it wasn't falling. But give him credit. He pitched a good game."

Hooton himself can't explain his seemingly mystical grip on the Phillies, except to say that he fears no one in their high-powered batting order.

"I just go out there and challenge them," said Hooton. "They're challenging me. They're like the Pittsburgh Pirates when it comes to batting. You try to stay close to your pattern of pitching. You hope if you make a mistake, it doesn't hurt."

Hooton, who once pitched a no-hitter against the Phillies while a member of Chicago Cubs, allowed merely a single and double Monday night—both to Garry Maddox.

The performance embarrassed the Phillies before a crowd of 60,942 at Veterans Stadium—the largest ever to see them at home.

In other National League games, Cincinnati Reds routed Montreal Expos 11-2, Atlanta Braves stopped Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6, Chicago Cubs nipped San Diego Padres 1-0, San Francisco Giants outscored St. Louis Cardinals 6-1 and Houston Astros checked New York Mets 7-5.

In the American League, Boston Red Sox rapped out 11 hits and trounced Chicago White Sox 11-3 to climb into a second-place tie with Cleveland Indians in the East.

Rookie Butch Hobson and Cecil Cooper drove in three runs apiece and Luis Tiant scattered 11 hits for his 10th victory as the Red Sox won for the sixth time in their last eight games and reached the .500 mark for the first time since April 29.

Elsewhere, Kansas City Royals beat New York Yankees 2-1, Texas Rangers rallied to beat Detroit Tigers 5-6, California Angels whipped Cleveland Indians 3-1, Oakland A's downed Baltimore Orioles 4-1 and Milwaukee Brewers nipped Minnesota Twins 3-2.

Hooton, who earned his sixth victory and first since June 9, when he beat the Phillies in Los Angeles, got timely support from Steve Garvey and Bill Russell, each with a solo homer, Russell also singled home the Dodgers' third run.

Joe Morgan drove in five runs, four on a grand-slam home run, and Jack Billingham pitched an eight-hitter as Cincinnati walloped Montreal. Billingham, 6-6, walked two and struck out six in picking up his first victory in two decisions against Montreal this year.

The only runs off Billingham came on Pete Mackanin's leadoff homer in the fifth and Andre Thornton's homer leading off the seventh.

Darrell Chaney capped a seven-run eighth inning with a three-run triple, helping Atlanta beat Pittsburgh. A crowd of 45,467, drawn partly by the prospect of a giant fireworks display afterwards, saw Atlanta break a seven-game losing streak to the Pirates.

Little Leaguers Set for Playoffs

Play in the Greater Victoria Little League baseball tournaments will start Saturday with four teams competing in each of three area finals. Two clubs will advance from each area tournament to the six-team district playoff.

The area one event will take place at the National League's Hillside Avenue Park. Teams are Oak Bay, Lakehill, National and American.

Area two competition will be at Sidney with Sidney, Beacon Hill, Hampton and Layritz entered.

Area three play will be held at Lampson St. Park between Esquimalt Lions, Central Saanich, Gordon Head and Triangle.

Games will be held on Saturday at 2 and 6 p.m., Sunday at 2 p.m. and week days at 6:30 p.m.

The district tournament is scheduled at Hampton Park and will mark the occasion of the 20th anniversary of Hampton in the Greater Victoria Little League program. It will run from July 15 to July 23.

The format for the provincial tournament, which will be held at Coquitlam, will be changed this year to include a team from each of the eight districts in the province. It will be a double-loss tournament with three games on opening day, July 23.

Winner of the B.C. championships will compete in the Canadian tournament in Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 7. The Canadian champion will play in the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Penn., Aug. 23.

Esquimalt Lions Little League is the defending city and district champion.

Western Loses Meet for Midgets

A special midget auto racing program scheduled for July 17 has been cancelled and Western Speedway officials are blaming it on the ferry rate increase.

"The president of the Washington Midget Racing Association contacted Western Speedway this past week to tell us the event would have to be cancelled because his car owners and drivers could not afford to pay the $100-plus ferry fees to get their cars on and off the Island," assistant speedway manager Barry Rankin announced.

"The loss of this event was a direct result of the ferry rate increase," he continued. "Two weeks ago, Tacoma driver Ron Eaton was charged $120 to get his tow vehicle and race car on and off the Island."

Boozer Retires

NEW YORK (AP) — Running back Emerson Boozer of New York Jets has announced his retirement from the National Football League team. Boozer, who was the Jets' all-time leading rusher with 5,135 yards in 10 seasons, will join CBS television as an analyst on the network's coverage of NFL games.

Football Clinic

The B.C. Amateur Football Association will conduct a summer clinic in Victoria on Saturday and Sunday at the Henderson Park Pavilion on Cedar Hill Crossroad.

Instructors will be Gary Swertfeger, former professional with the B.C. Lions and Oakland Raiders and present head coach at West Vancouver High School; Mike Ross, former professional with B.C. Lions and head coach at Coquitlam High School; and Frank Smith, head coach at the University of British Columbia.

An added feature of this year's clinic will be offering of Level 1 coaching certificates to coaches in attendance.

A similar clinic will be held in Nanaimo on July 17 and 18.

Anybody wishing further information on the clinics is asked to call Ron Thurnthwaite at 592-7110 in Victoria and Dick Bearnish, 758-2374 in Nanaimo.

Two Voyageurs Nearing Finale of Trek

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Two Kentuckians in kayaks paddled out of Vancouver Monday on the last leg of their journey duplicating the Lewis and Clark expedition.

Bob Witt, 28, and Phil Babiak, 17, headed down the Columbia River for Astoria, on the Oregon coast, their final stop, and also the last stop for the explorers who came to the Oregon territory in the early 19th century.

Witt and Babiak left North Dakota on April 20 and they have paddled down six rivers — the Missouri, Dearborne, Blackfoot, Clearwater, Snake and Columbia.

They expect to arrive in Astoria on Thursday.

The kayak trip was Babiak's idea. "I wanted to see the Pacific Northwest," he said. "I got $100 from my hometown bicentennial commission and advertised for a partner. Witt applied, giving up his job to learn to koyak.

The pair averaged about 30 miles a day, setting their pace according to characteristics of the rivers. They bought food as they needed it.

"And we shot a few critters along the way, and cooked them in a pot we brought along on the trip," Babiak said.

Babiak said he studied the Lewis and Clark journals before undertaking the trip. Most of the trek has retraced the old 1804-1806 expedition, except for some stretches where the kayak adventurers opted to continue on water instead of going overland as Lewis and Clark had.

"Nature was our main obstacle," said Witt.

"We battled fatigue, cold weather, wind and an improper diet. In the Columbia gorge, which separates Washington and Oregon, the winds got up to 50 miles an hour. At times it seemed the wind would rip the paddles almost out of our hands."

Witt repaired rock rips in the bottom of his kayak with tape.

The pair said they will return to Louisville by train.

Thwarted Balloon Men Willing to Try Again

NEWARK — Publisher Malcolm Forbes and Bob Sparks, both thwarted in their attempts to cross the Atlantic by balloon, say they will try again to make the trip. "It is not an easy flight, but I think it can be done," said Forbes, who had to scratch his first try last year when his balloon was damaged in California during preparations for a transcontinental shakedown flight. Sparks, who ditched at sea 125 miles east of Cape Cod in his second unsuccessful flight last summer, said, "I feel there is a good possibility someone will make it across this year or next year. I'd like to be that someone."

KELOWNA — Former premier W. A. C. Bennett was back at his home Monday after being discharged from Kelowna General Hospital for the second time in a week. Bennett, 75, was re-admitted to the hospital Friday suffering from chest pains. He had been discharged the previous Wednesday after undergoing two weeks treatment for a heart attack he suffered on June 17.

WHITEHORSE — A 21-year-old Langley woman was reported in stable condition in Whitehorse hospital Monday, after being mauled by a black bear in Kluane National Park Friday. Jacobi Floris was mauled as she was walking with a friend in the woods near the Yukon Highway, northwest of here. The bear was later shot.

VANCOUVER — Dr. Elod Macskasy, of Vancouver, has been elected president of the British Columbia Chess Federation. Dr. Macskasy, a veteran master, succeeds Paul Brown, also of Vancouver. Brian McLaren, of Vancouver, was elected vice-president, succeeding Ray Kerr, of Victoria.

VANCOUVER — David Lewis, former national New Democratic Party leader, takes up his political science teaching duties today at Simon Fraser University.

MONTREAL — Herbert Howard, Canadian publicist and director of information for the Royal Canadian Navy during the Second World War, has died in Montreal after a lengthy illness. He was 84. A former journalist, Howard worked for both the Winnipeg Free Press and the Vancouver Sun. He later became publicity director for the Winnipeg Electric Co.

PORT HURON, Mich. — Don Viano, also known as Viano The Great, spent only about 20 seconds in the St. Clair River Monday despite the fact he was handcuffed and chained to a coffin-shaped board with 60 pounds of iron weights attached to it. Viano, 47, of Romulus, Mich., said he is an admirer of escape artist Harry Houdini who conquered the Detroit river about 50 years ago.

TORONTO — Barbara Olasz, of Edmonton, has been presented with a scroll designating her as a Venturer, the highest award in the Canadian Scouting movement. She is the first girl to attain the award and is now looking for a Rover group willing to make room for her.

DUNNEVILLE, Ont. — A 41-year-old man apparently was run over by his own car in a nearby cemetery, police say. It appears Jan Moesker of Essex County drove to the cemetery and parked his car at the top of a slope. He left the vehicle running, and as he walked down the hill in front of it, the car apparently rolled down the hill, knocked him down and crushed him.

Finkleman Back

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Arts Centre announced Monday that Emanuel Finkleman of Winipeg, a optometrist, has been reappointed for a three-year term on its board of trustees.

ROLLING STONE

By RICH WISEMAN

ALICE COOPER had to cancel his 34-date U.S.-Canada tour when it was discovered he is suffering from acute anemia. Cooper was taken to the UCLA Medical Centre after collapsing at a L.A. rehearsal studio June 10; rest has been prescribed.

"Everyone recovers at his own rate," manager Shep Gordon said.

"It could be four weeks, it could be six months."

Gordon said Cooper is now laying low "in the islands" (where, he wouldn't say). "If he were to stay in L.A., he would just sit in front of the TV and drink beer all day."

JOHN LENNON and Paul McCartney have contributed a song apiece to Ringo Starr's next album, now being mixed at L.A.'s Cherokee Studios.

John's is called A Dose of Rock and Roll, and one listener described it as "real commercial — it sounds like the early Beatles."

Lennon played keyboards on the track and he and wife Yoko added some background vocals. McCartney and wife Linda also sing background on Paul's song, Pure Gold. Couples spent a night in the studio.

WE VISITED with McCartney backstage at the Cow Palace in San Francisco and found out why Lennon was a no-show at the two Wings concerts in New York.

Simple, really: "I don't think he was in town, actually. But they were in town one of the nights. I gave them a ring, and they were in bed.

They said, 'Glad the show went well,' and we left it at that" . . . While the Cow Palace audience also lacked for ex-Beatles, Steve Stills, Neil Young and Paul Kantner were spotted.

Kantner liked Sunday's show so much he returned the next night with the rest of his group, The Jefferson Starship.

The Starship, by the way, recently re-signed with RCA. Figures were not announced, but manager Bill Thompson said it was a "multi-million-dollar deal."

IT'S BEEN AWHILE since that Philippines typhoon stopped Francis Ford Coppola and company in their soggy tracks during the filming of Apocalypse Now, but we couldn't pass up the chance to get a report from one of the actors who was there — promoter Bill Graham.

Graham, who took time off from his busiest-concert-season-ever to play the part of a "sleazy press agent," said he shot all of one scene during his two waterlogged weeks in Manila and environs. "It was madness . . . Downtown Manila, a skyscraper town with eight million people, flooded with two feet of water. (On location) I lived in a ramshackle house with no heat, electricity. The worst thing was that there was no place to go.

"A raging storm outside and nothing to do on the inside. It was the most difficult two weeks in my life."

Graham will return to Manila in mid-July to finish shooting his scenes. The rain didn't dampen his enthusiasm for the project: "I've seen some of the rushes, and what Francis has done so far is brilliant."

Cleric's Wife Wasn't Shady Lady

MIAMI, Fla. — A minister's wife who sued the city because she was mistaken for a prostitute has settled for $1,500 so her husband can return to the pulpit.

Brenda Hunt, 22, said her husband lost his job as pastor of New Jerusalem Church after she was arrested for loitering on a street frequented by prostitutes.

Rev. Larry Hunt has been an ordained Pentacostal minister for 13 years.

Mrs. Hunt said she accepted the token settlement so her husband may report that her name has been cleared when he attends a convention of Pentecostal ministers in Rochester, N.Y., next week. Though he returned to work temporarily last month, she said, it will take a convention vote to get his job back permanently.

Mrs. Hunt was arrested June 30, 1975, when she went out for bread while cooking dinner for her family and two visiting couples.

BURGLAR WANTED WINE NOT CASH

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The burglar who broke into a posh restaurant showed discriminating taste. He chose 17 bottles of the finest vintages from a rack of 5,300 bottles of wine.

Police said Monday that a burglar made off with $3,000 worth of rare wines from the Down Under, which was closed Sunday for the Fourth of July.

"There is no qustion that the robber came here strictly for those wines," said Leonee Picot, co-owner of the tavern. "He ignored the money in the cash registers and in the safe upstairs. He took strictly the best."

Picot said an inventory of the wine cellar showed that two bottles of 1899 Chateau Margaux, each valued at $1,000 on the tavern's wine list, and a 1900 Chateau Margaux, were missing.

Picot said he believes the burglar was "a wine nut" or a thief who had already lined up a wine collector to buy the hot grape.

WARMING UP FOR THE OLYMPICS

Kiwis Sparkle, Aussies Faint

MONTREAL (CP) — The Australian flag went up, Waltzing Matilda played and two Australian athletes fainted as the Olympic Village welcomed the Australian and British national teams Monday.

An unidentified woman and steeplechase racer Peter Larkins were overcome in the 34-degree Celsius heat during the short dual flag raising ceremony for the two countries.

Australian track and field manager John Daly blamed a 19-hour non-stop flight and climate differences for his athletes' discomfort.

"For us in the southern states it's cold right now; it's a question of acclimatizing," he said.

Other Olympic teams which arrived Sunday and Monday included Japan, Russia, Poland, Italy, Ireland, the Low Countries, Hungary Bulgaria, Ethiopia and New Guinea.

More than 1,000 athletes have so far taken up residence in the east-end apartments, located next to the major Olympic sporting facilites.

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Dick Quax missed the world 5000-metre mark by one-tenth of a second and John Walker was two seconds off the 1,500-metre record in a strong display of running by the New Zealanders at an international pre-Olympic track meet Monday.

Quax, 27, was timed in 13:13.1 in a race which produced five national records.

Walker, 24, the mile king who shattered the world 2,000-metre mark in Oslo last Wednesday, earlier had recorded the world's best time this year in the metric mile, 3:34.2.

Both times bettered the previous track records at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium.

Emjel Puttemans of Belguim holds the world 5,000-metre mark of 13:13.0, set four years ago. Filbert Bayi of Tanzania set the 1,500-metre standard of 3:32.2 two years ago.

Quax took the lead at the 1,500-metre mark and never lost it, despite a fantastic kick which started with 300 metres to go by West German Klaus-Peter Hildenbrand of West Germany.

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Ken Maaten, 22, of Sarnia was named to Canada's modern pentathlon team for the Montreal Olympics Monday replacing 16-year-old Alain Williams of Brossard, Que.

Williams was dropped Friday night because of a broken leg suffered during an unsupervised equestrian training session.

CARDIFF (Reuter) — Lynn Davies, the Canadian Track and Field Association's first technical director who will leave his present job Sept. 30, has been appointed technical officer with the Sports Council for Wales, it was announced Monday.

Davies had announced he would not seek a renewal of his three-year contract.

He won a gold medal for Great Britain in the long jump at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo and also won golds in the 1966 European championships and 1966 and 1970 Commonwealth Games.

Davies had been offered the job in his homeland last year but turned it down because he said he felt an obligation to Canadian athletics to stay on until after the Montreal Olympics. Davies starts his new job Nov. 1.

HELSINKI (Reuter) — Lasse Viren, the Finnish distance star who won the 5000 and 10,000 metres at the Munich Olympics four years ago, has been nominated for these two events and also the marathon at the Montreal Games.

In the Finish track and field team, announced Monday, Viren is in the 5000 metres along with Pekka Paeivaerinta and Lasse Orimus, the 10,000 metres with Paeivaerinta and Martti Vainio and the marathon with Haakon Spik and Jukka Toivla.

Viren holds the Finnish records for 5000 metres at 13 minutes 16.4 seconds and 10,000 metres at 27:38.4.

In Today's deal, South, after hearing his partner make an opening bid, made up his mind that he was going to be in a slam contract. En route, he took out some insurance. On this day, his insurance paid off.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♡.

Certainly no one is going to fault South who, after hearing his partner make a vulnerable opening bid, concluded that a makable slam existed in the North-South cards. His jump-shift response of two spades informed North that South had a slam-going hand.

North's rebid of two no-trump, suggested a minimum opening bid. Now South made his "insurance" call: a "psychic" bid of three diamonds, the aim being to inhibit a diamond lead by West after South ultimately bid six spades. North's second no-trump rebid showed a lack of desire to move forward toward a slam. South now barged into a six-spade contract.

West thought long and hard before making his opening lead. Based on West's diamond holding, he knew that South didn't have a good diamond suit. And having had experience with this sort of bidding sequence, he appreciated that South might have made a psychic call in diamonds, to conceal his weakness in that suit. Yet, as West viewed it, South might have a doubleton K-x of diamonds, in which case the opening lead of the diamond ace would promote South's king into a winner.

In addition, South's bid of three diamonds might be a cue bid, showing first-round control in diamonds. In this case, South would be void; and the lead of the diamond ace might make a winner out of dummy's (presumed) king of diamonds.

Finally, after much agonized contemplation, West elected to lead the only unbid suit, hearts. As is evident, declarer now came home with all 13 tricks: eight spades, three hearts, and three clubs (one extra). As is equally evident, had West led the diamond ace, and followed up by playing a second diamond, the defenders would have taken the first two tricks.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Wednesday, July 7

By SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concepts concerning money, income, possessions could undergo change. Move with the times. Consolidate — close ranks. Refuse to be backed into corner where you stand alone. You have more support than "opposition" may be able to discern.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stress on partnership, legalities, rights, permissions, relationship of permanent nature. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. If flexible — and have sense of humor — you'll make significant gains. Know it and act accordingly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be revising, reviewing, tearing down and rebuilding. Steer clear of one who has scheme that purportedly gets you something for nothing. Key is to become familiar with material at hand. You will understand values — if you give yourself a chance. Scorpio is involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): What may seem a disappointment is merely a delay. Events are different than they appear to be — there will be a boomerang and you benefit. Member of opposite sex plays significant role.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home area is highlighted — family circle can become a more harmonious site. Know it and make intelligent concessions. If diplomatic, you'll be happier. Taurus, Libra figure in picture. Avoid direct confrontations. Speak frankly, but avoid any tinge of arrogance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel plans subject to change. Relative could have delusions of grandeur. Maintain sense of balance — and humor. See as is, not as others would want you to see. Realistic attitude saves money and prevents entanglement in embarrassing situation. You gain valuable insights — if you so permit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money, business, financial decisions and responsibilities are highlighted. Capricorn, Cancer individuals could figure prominently. One who means much to you confides dilemma. Don't cast first stone. Evaluate aims, goals, possessions. You're worth more than you might think!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You receive pleasant surprise. Popularity surges — cycle is such that timing is on target. You get good notices, publicity. Aries, Libra figure prominently. You will complete important project. More persons ask for your product, services — more want you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You gain access to "hidden" information. You become capable of detective work, of putting clues together, of coming up with complete story. You get response from efforts — one you love also responds, more so than in recent past: Leo, Aquarius could be in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message for valid hint. Accent on hopes, desires, changes, member of opposite sex — and offspring. You learn where you stand, what you desire, what you'll get and what must be relinquished. Conserve, consolidate — gather and delineate data.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Find humor — you'll need it! Family members may set up "camps." You'll be pulled in various directions, urged to take sides. Key is to be flexible, to know that powerful storm will soon blow over. Social activity increases.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check details connected with special study, travel. Aquarius, Taurus, Leo figure prominently. Key is to have faith in ideas, principles. Realize that delays are temporary, that far-away concepts are closer than might be imagined.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, spiritual and have started new project. July will be your most significant month of 1976. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are sensitive, loyal, temperamental, stubborn and affectionate. You're going to be richer!

Legal Aid provided the difference Monday in Victoria provincial court when a 41-year-old seaman-oiler aboard a Korean wheat freighter came up on a Victoria charge of shoplifting a $375 jacket Friday from W. and J. Wilson, 1221 Government.

Friday, Judge F. S. Green had been unable to explain to Han Jung Ung of Pusan, South Korea, the differences in choosing trial in provincial, county or supreme court — mainly because the interpreter, Ung's captain, wasn't able to grasp the legal complexities.

Monday, Legal Aid duty counsel John Stowell and a new interpreter, a Korean living in this area, worked together to provide the necessary understanding. Ung chose provincial court trial, pleaded guilty to attempted theft and was fined $125.

Ung only had $50 and the fine was made payable forthwith by Green but shipping agents from King Bros., said the total would be paid in time for the ship to leave at noon Monday. Other sources indicated Ung, father of four children, might lose his job when he got home.

Preliminary hearings of two charges against Paul Joseph Desjarlais, 30, were scheduled for completion Monday, but neither made it.

Hearing of a Nanaimo break-in charge began and will be completed on a date to be set today. Hearing of a Victoria charge of theft and possession of a vehicle didn't even get started and will also get a new date today.

Desjarlais is to return on two days in late July for preliminary hearings of two major charges — one of forcible seizure, break-ins and theft in Metchosin last winter and a second of unlawful confinement and prison breach in a Wilkinson Road jail hostage incident in February.

A record of four convictions in the past seven years, two of them for possession of drugs, meant a 10-day jail term for Allen Charles McLaughlin, 24, of Quathiaski Cove on Quadra Island.

He was sentenced by Green after pleading guilty to a charge of possession of about 150 marijuana seeds found Sunday afternoon when he was checked through customs leaving the Princess Marguerite.

McLaughlin said the seeds were "just scattered around" in a knapsack and "could have been there for a year."

Bail was refused by Green for Nanaimo area resident Ronald Larsen, 30, on a charge of importing and trafficking in marijuana June 25 in the Sidney area and the case was remanded one week so an early date can be found for a preliminary hearing. Green granted a defence request for an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details.

Victoria area resident David Kurt Brauner, 24, address not known, chose trial by county court judge on a charge of trafficking in heroin Jan. 13 in Victoria. His preliminary hearing was set by Green for July 26.

Two young men chose trials by judge and jury on separate Victoria charges of using violence while robbing a Victoria man June 18 in a hotel-pub washroom. Green put aside Oct. 20 for the preliminary hearing of Martin Lawrence Alphonse, 20, of 614 Esquimalt, and Oct. 22 for the hearing of Glen Malcolm Pratt, 21, of 1010 Balmoral.

Three persons were fined $350 each by Judge Harold Alder in traffic court following pleas of guilty to separate charges of impaired driving in the Colwood area. They were Maureen Joan Worthington, 39, of 642 Admirals, stopped Wednesday; Robert Boucher, 26, CFB Naden, stopped Sunday, and Wayne Ronald Hall, 36, of 2568 Selwyn, stopped March 17.

Stealing On Job Nets Jail Extension

A 19-year-old Wilkinson Road jail inmate who stole from his boss while on a work-release program was sentenced Monday in Victoria provincial court to an extra three months in jail.

"That close to it and you've blown it," Judge F. S. Green told Crispin Eugene Judge, who was due for full release Sept. 6 after being sentenced Aug. 28, 1975, in Port Alberni to 18 months for false pretences.

Judge pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of stealing a cashbox and its contents of $40 in coins Sunday morning from the Olympic restaurant, 636 Johnson, were he worked six days a week as a cook.

Judge told the judge he was allowed out in the daytime six days a week for his split-shift job and got weekend passes each week for the seventh day — but "I got mixed up with some MDA" and spent the $40 on drugs.

Green said Judge had "the benefit of what appears to be a pretty liberal program of rehabilitation . . . with a fair amount of freedom, yet you were unable to handle it."

Campbell River area resident William Cooper, 20, pleaded guilty to a Sooke charge of escaping June 26 when he walked away from the Jordan River detention camp and was sentenced by Green to an extra two months.

Prosecutor Armand Petronio said Cooper was sentenced June 11 to six months over and above a 15-month term imposed Aug. 6, 1975, for a number of break-ins, and was due for release Oct. 20. Cooper was picked up in the Thetis Lake area after about 18 hours of freedom.

The Spark of Genius at UVic?

By AB KENT
Times Staff

If Reg Clements bought his engine by horsepower rating, he got gypped: it doesn't drive a labor-saving machine, power a boat or go anywhere.

The 7½ horsepower light engine bolted down in his basement laboratory cost $15,000, or $2,000 per horsepower.

But Clements doesn't think about his engine in such everyday terms. The University of Victoria physicist is more concerned about what happens inside the engine than what it turns out in power, or how much it cost.

And his research could produce practical results for industry and private motorists by helping to conserve fuel, reduce pollution and engine maintenance costs by more efficient fuel ignition.

Clements' engine work began about two years ago when the international fuel crisis and environmental concerns coincided to focus attention on more economical use of energy. And was a spinoff from work he has been doing for the past nine years in the field of gaseous plasmas.

For the record, a plasma is a gas ionized by heating or passing high intensity electrons through it to produce, for example, the glow in a neon tube.

The internal combustion engine was a means for Clements to measure what happens to plasma under high pressure, and this in turn gives a clue to the composition of the air-fuel mixture being burned.

Going hand in hand with the project was the development of a super spark plug that sends a jet of crackling blue "lightning" out the tip of the plug instead of a miniscule arc as in conventional igniters.

So far, more commercial interest has been shown in the spark plug than in the concept of an engine monitoring system.

Clements said thinking toward the super plug seems favorable in the U.K., where the Cussons engine works custom-built the test bed for his research.

He is still working on North American manufacturers regarding the development of his monitoring system although Ford has turned him down.

Canadian industry should have first chance at whatever practical system emerges from Clements' work inasmuch as most of the research money has come from grants supplied by National Research Council.

Operating funds — covering theoretical and practical programs, salary for technical assistants and other non-capital costs — are from annual NRC grants, supplemented by Uvic which provides the working space.

In addition, the NRC makes available capital funds for such things as the purcase of the engine and test bed.

He has worked on his plasma theories for nine years with the aid of NRC grants, with collaboration from D. R. Topham and P. R. Smy, both of the University of Alberta department of electrical engineering. Clements is a graduate of the University of B.C. who took his doctorate at the University of Saskatchewan and spent a year at U of A before coming here.

To get into the area of internal combustion engines, Clements and his lab assistants first set up a worn-out lawn mower engine, rebuiding it to suit their purposes.

A desire to run the engine as lean as possible — with a maximum of air and minimum of fuel — led to the development of the high energy spark plug to avoid the problem of burning up and misfiring conventional plugs.

Under opposite conditions, conventional plugs with their limited spark, tend to foul easily, and in either case inefficiency results.

About 100 times more energy is produced by the super-spark plug compared with the conventional capacitor-discharge ignition system.

Clements' spark does not merely jump a fraction of a centimetre between points — it jets out of a cylindrical recess at the base of the plug much fatter and about 20 times longer than a typical engine spark, as if issuing from a mozzle and producing a crisp crack from the shock wave it creates.

It drives the test engine at a steady roar, muffled as much as possible with silencers and exhaust fans vented outside Clements' basement lab in the Elliott building.

Besides being able to ignite mixtures as lean as 22-1, the hot plug works well at low temperatures, a feat which drivers in frozen Canada should welcome as an aid to pre-dawn startups in the middle of winter.

Keeping an internal combustion engine in tune — whether it is of conventional carburetor or of fuel injection design — is a demanding task at the best of times.

A car begins to go out of tune the moment it is adjusted, Clements notes. An efficient fuel system, therefore, makes up for a lot of latitude in the tuning while saving the motorist dollars on his gas bill and repair costs for associated problems.

Ferry Crew Stars In Rescue Drama

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A man in his 70s jumped off the B.C. Ferries Queen of Esquimalt late Monday afternoon leaving behind his wallet, watch and a note apologizing to other passengers for any inconvenience he might cause them.

For 15 minutes, several hundred passengers watched the drama as the ferry crew lowered a lifeboat and fished the man out of the water.

Delta municipal police have not identified the man, believed from the Lower Mainland, but said he is in stable condition today in Richmond General Hospital.

The incident occurred near Active Pass when the ferry was about 40 minutes out of Tsawwassen on the 5 p.m. run to Swartz Bay.

Mrs. Cecile Martin, of Kelowna, said she was in the lounge near the newstand when she saw a man dressed in olive green trousers and a short-sleeved green shirt climb onto a box and stand on the starboard deck railing. He stood there for about 10 seconds, she said, before disappearing over the side.

"It all happened so fast," she said. "We realized he was about to jump but there was nothing we could do because we were inside."

Another woman passenger standing near the man screamed for help, Mrs. Martin said.

Within seconds the ferry began to turn around and eight to nine crew members clambered into a lifeboat on the port side.

Passenger Roger Hollick, of Victoria, said the crew had problems lowering the lifeboat.

"It took close to 10 minutes to get it into the water," he said.

Once in the water the crew seemed to have difficulty getting away from the side of the ship, Hollick said, adding it took them about three minutes to reach the man who by this time was floating face-down.

He said there were rumors among some passengers the ferry had run over the man as it approached him.

"One moment he was lying face up in the water," said a passenger. "The next time I looked he had bobbed up on the other side of the ferry; face-down."

The captain, however, later took to the ship's public address system, denied the rumor, and read out a note apparently left by the man apologizing for the trouble he would cause.

"Once they got him aboard the lifeboat they worked on him constantly," he said. "They applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, pumped on his back and put a piece of rope in his mouth to keep him from choking. I must say they did all they could to help him."

Two doctors on board the ferry applied first aid until the ferry reached Tsawwassen where an ambulance took the man to hospital.

CROW LAW?

Residents of south Oak Bay feel they have something to crow about. Crows. Too many of them.

A petition with 56 signatures landed before aldermen at council meeting Monday seeking some action against the noisy black scavengers which Mrs. Kathryn Botting, 620 Newport, feels are threatening songbirds.

Mayor Brian Smith observed the problem has arisen before and the municipality had found itself powerless to deal with the nuisance.

"Any time we've tried to take any action, we've found we had very little effective jurisdiction over crows. And we have found there's a crow's protection league . . ." Smith said.

The petition was sent to committee for study.

Saanich to Call Hearing On Wicklow-Tolmie Zoning

Saanich will call a public hearing on a rezoning application to build 53 rental apartments at the corner of Tolmie and Wicklow.

The application was turned down at a public hearing on Nov. 4, 1975 because residents were concerned about increased traffic on Wicklow.

In a report from the Saanich advisory planning commission, council was told Monday that siting of the building has now been changed so as to discourage traffic on Wicklow.

The building will contain 40 one-bedroom and 13 two-bedroom units.

Photos On Display

A national exhibition of survey photographs of the Canadian West from the second half of the last century is currently on display at the Provincial Archives gallery at 655 Bellville.

The display continues through Aug. 11, Mondays through Fridays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Old Sol Was Hot

. . . But Weatherman Gloomily Predicts Showers

If you blinked yesterday and missed the sun, better get up early tomorrow and enjoy old Sol's brief return — there may not be much more for the following few days.

The thermometer hit 24 degrees Celsius, about normal for this time of year.

The weather office at the airport reports a series of systems are rolling in off the Pacific, and although the bureau predicts a break Wednesday, it is calling for clouds in the evening.

After that, Victoria is in the path of a closely bunched series of systems that should bring mostly clouds, some showers and possibly rainy periods for at least Thursday and Friday.

Nobody was willing to predict the weekend weather. Maybe Monday was summer?

If it was, some managed to enjoy it anyway.

At Willows Beach, Times photographer Bill Halkett found three Mount Douglas High School girls, Bernadette Bieniawski, Donna Hepting and Dana Senini happily cooling off.

Four boys with the same object — to escape the heat — staged a brief sprinkler battle on the cricket field at Beacon Hill Park (below). Park employees quickly chased them off, Halkett reports.

Action on Roads Sought by Council

Saanich is going to tackle the provincial government on two issues where council feels it is being short-changed.

Mayor Ed Lum received unanimous approval Monday to form a delegation to meet with Highways Minister Alex Fraser in an effort to get the minister to change his priorities on the Blanshard Street extension and the widening of the Trans-Canada Highway.

He was also authorized to tell the provincial government Saanich is not in favor of the Helmcken Road site recently approved for the new hospital to replace the Victoria General Hospital.

Lum will also let the senior government know the municipality does not have the money to upgrade roads in the Helmcken area which would act as feeders to the hospital.

Lum told council Monday the cost of upgrading roads in that area is somewhere between $1 million and $1.5 million.

"We don't have any funds for upgrading of roads in the Helmcken area," Ald. Sandy Noel said. "We should make it quite clear to the provincial government that we do not have the funds to upgrade roads for a hospital in the wrong area."

The provincial government has been bandying about plans for the Blanshard extension for more than 15 years. Saanich is upset at Fraser's recent announcement that the extension will take second place to the Trans-Canada Highway project.

The former NDP government had given the green light to the Blanshard extension and work was to have started this year.

The extension would have dovetailed with the shot-down proposal to build the new hospital at Douglas and McKenzie.

"All the technical reviews show that the Blanshard Street extension should have higher priority than the Trans-Canada Highway," Lum said Monday. "They will have a bottleneck at both ends and we will have a very congested Douglas Street on our hands."

Ald. Fred Severson, a city firefighter, said he is concerned about the safety factor if the provincial government insists on building the hospital on Helmcken.

"There are no fire fighting facilities in that area," he said, "Saanich is the closest and would have to come out and assist. Safety . . . this is one of the key areas."

Saanich municipal engineer Cliff Warren today announced a program to upgrade five miles of local roads within the municipality at bargain basement prices.

He said council has made $200,000 available to assist in paying for the projects.

All the work must be initiated by residents through a petition.

The price tag is $12.50 per foot frontage, which will cost residents $60 per year if they have a 50-foot lot. This produces a reconstructed road widened to 22 feet plus an asphalt water stop at the side of the road. In addition, if there is an open drainage ditch it will be enclosed.

Before today any reconstructed road had to be 28 feet wide with full curbs and cost $25 per front foot. This would have cost the homeowner $120 per year instead of $60.

Warren said he hoped residents would take advantage of the lower cost to petition for upgrading of their roads.

There are many places in the municipality where upgrading would be desirable, but Lakehill and Marigold are the centres where potholes are most evident, he said.

"This program is available to all areas of the municipality but we expect that it will have particular value for the northern and western parts," he said.

A resident wishing to have his road upgraded may start his own petition or may obtain a petition form from the municipal clerk.

The petition must be signed by 50 per cent of the resident owners representing two-thirds of the taxable foot frontage, he said.

The petitions are forwarded to the municipal clerk. The project then needs only official council approval before work begins.

Warren said work on the road could begin as soon as six weeks after the petition has been received. Four of the weeks are required for council to complete the formalities of passing the public works bylaw.

If only a small number are received, the municipality would initiate a few petitions in areas where upgrading of roads was overdue.

A petition initiated by Saanich needs 50 per cent of the owner residents but representing only 50 per cent of the taxable foot frontage instead of two-thirds of the foot frontage which is required when a petition is initiated by the residents themselves.

In other Saanich business, the municipality today said it had granted $15,000 to help pay costs of hiring 30 people for environmental work this summer.

A total of 27 students age 17 to 19 are working with three military supervisors on Swan Lake walkways, Colquitz Creek and other similar projects. Their salaries are paid by the federal government and the municipal grant helps purchase equipment.

The work began Monday and will continue until the end of August.

Most of those hired are from local high schools while the rest are from the University of Victoria.

Saanich also announced it will build the second all-weather soccer pitch in the municipality with a completion date set for Sept. 1, 1977. It will be located at Prospect Park.

Farmers Face Financial Chill As Cool Climate Lingers

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

While drought and heat plague Europe, lingering cold weather threaten lean times for local farmers.

Jack Wessel, manager of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, estimates that some farmers may lose as much as 25 per cent of their incomes because of poor growing conditions and late crops.

"Depending on the crops being grown and the location, the impact (of the weather) will vary," he said. "Any crops requiring sun — like corn, peas and beans — are going to need some pretty intensive heat soon. The yields are down substantially."

Wessel said the poor growing conditions are also compounding the perennial problem of competition from California growers.

California producers wanting to clear their fields of lettuce for new crops can dump lettuce in B.C. at a price of about $3 for 24 heads while local farmers must sell for $4 for 24 heads.

"With their weather they can grow at least two yields," he said. "This is one of the worst situations we face every year. Being so cold and so much further north aggravates the situation."

Dairy farmers can also expect to be hit if a long spell of warm weather doesn't come soon.

Corn and hay being grown for feed is being affected.

"Corn grown for cattle feed grew four inches and just sat there," Wessel said. "Farmers will have to buy more forage from Alberta and Washington."

George Aylard of the Island Farms Dairies Co-op Association agreed with Wessel the cool weather could result in a loss of 25 per cent in net income for some farmers.

"People who depend on local hay could have problems. It could mean people will be buying more alfafa," Aylard said.

He explained that the longer hay is left standing the more it loses its protein, resulting in the protein having to be replaced through buying other feed.

The normal rainfall for May is 30.5 millimeters. A total of 43.4 millimeters was reported at the Victoria International Airport this year, better than a third more than the average.

The mean temperature for June was 1.7 degrees below normal.

Protests Pound Oak Bay

Protest by the pound piled up at Oak Bay council Monday — mostly letters and petitions against a proposed sewage pumping station on Shoal Bay.

About two pounds of documents were distributed to the aldermen and reporters present.

The Shoal Bay protest was referred without discussion to later consideration, following a special public hearing set for 5:15 tonight.

The hearing will be in the Senior Citizens' Centre adjoining the branch library on Monterey in order to accommodate the crowd expected to show up.

Among the material filed were 25 letters either condemning the site in the 500 block Beach Drive or expressing concern that a less objectionable location had not been proposed.

Book Formula 'Unfair'

Saanich is balking at signing the new intermunicipal agreement for library costs because it considers the formula is unfair.

The crux of the problem is that provincial government property is not included in the cost-sharing formula base for assessment while federal property is.

This means that Victoria's B.C. Hydro site, as an example, would not be included on the assessment roll. The city receives a grant in lieu of taxes on the property.

Ald. David Paterson said Monday because the city has more provincial government property than the other core municipalities it would be getting a better break from the cost-sharing formula.

"The ICBC pay full taxes, as an example, (but is not on the assessment rolls)" municipal administrator Bill Tremayne told council on Monday. "We don't think that's fair. Some changes should be made in the contract."

Mayor Ed Lum said when he and the other mayors met to work out a cost-sharing formula they were told provincial government properties would be included.

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson said the comptrollers of the municipalities were going to get together to try and solve the problem.

"They should draw up a draft and spell this out," Lum observed, "We don't want arguments at a later date."

The council voted not to take any action until the situation is clarified and the formula meets their satisfaction.

Bad Weather Looming As Maui Racers Plow On

The leaders in the Victoria-Maui sailing classic were heading into bad weather today.

Bill Niemi's Joli of Seattle reported the winds were climbing and there were eight-foot waves.

She took over the lead from Doug Fruer's Ragtime of Seattle on Monday and this morning reported being 210 miles southwest of Cape flattery, 10 miles ahead of Ragtime.

Joli was the first boat to finish the 1974 Maui race.

In third position today was Norman Elliott's Orango-Tang of the Kitsilano Yacht Club, being 60 miles behind the lead boat. Placing next after her in the 32-boat fleet were Per Chistoffersen's Terna III of the West Vancouver Yacht Club and John Long's Trumpeter of Jericho from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

In sixth spot was Al Nelson's Lucifer of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Royal Needs $25,000 Fix

There's nothing so wrong with the municipal-owned Royal Theatre that about $25,000 couldn't set right.

At least that's the preliminary estimate of renovation costs to the 63-year-old building, Victoria's largest and most ornate theatre.

The estimate was contained in a draft copy of a report prepared by consulting engineers Willis Cunliffe Tait and Co., and presented to the tri-municipal Royal Theatre committee last Friday.

Victoria city delegate to the committee, Ald. Ron McKenzie said on Monday the report indicated there was some structural deterioration to the building, primarily in the theatre's bacony ledges.

If the restoration was done, he said, the life of the building would be extended 15 to 25 years.

The report also made it clear, McKenzie said, that a proposal to increase the seating capacity in the threatre from 1,400 to 1,900 would be impractical as it would be too costly and could impair the acoustics. The expansion had been suggested as a possible way of increasing revenues.

McKenzie said the committee has asked for more information from the consultants whose final report isn't expected until later this week.

Meanwhile, negotiations are underway to renew the contract between the Victoria-Saanich-Oak Bay municipal owners of the Royal and principle user, Famous Players.

The old contract expired the end of June.

McKenzie said the committee is seeking an increase in the rent Famous Players pays, from $2,000 a month to $2,200.

In addition, he said, the committee wants to reserve the theatre for 65 days a year for municipal-sponsored shows and community use. Under the old agreement 50 days were set aside for such use with the municialities paying Famous Players a per diem rate of $600 in summer and $800 in winter.

Ottawa Eyes Appeal on Seabed

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal justice department will spend the rest of the summer studying a British Columbia court decision that gave the provincial government ownership of the sea bottom between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

A spokesman for federal Justice Minister Ron Basford said Monday the department has begun studying the B.C. Court of Appeal decision, handed down last week, to decide whether to appeal the ruling to the Supreme Court of Canada.

But it cannot apply for a hearing until the high court ends its summer recess in September.

During the B.C. hearing, the federal government argued the seabed should fall within its jurisdiction. The cour ruled 3 to 2 in favor of the province.

A 1967 Supreme Court decision gave the federal government ownership of the continental shelf seabed from the low-water mark out.

Sources in Ottawa said the court probably found in B.C.'s favor because the 1967 decision awarded the continental shelf to the federal government on the basis that it was beyond the three-mile limit that traditionally had been the national boundary.

One source said that offshore seabed ownership has evolved in international law and discussions since the Second World War.

But the Georgia Strait amounted to internal waters that had been under Canadian control since British Columbia joined Confederation in 1871.

B.C. Attorney-General Garde Gardom said last week that he would urge federal authorities not to appeal.

Tanker Study Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A group representing shipyard owners has urged Prime Minister Trudeau to order a study of the use of tankers to move natural gas from the North.

In a letter to Trudeau a week ago, released Monday, the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association said use of tankers to carry gas is growing around the world.

"We believe therefore that the advantages and disadvantages of the liquid natural gas carrier should be thoroughly examined and compared with the pipeline options by the government and its agencies," the association said.

Under the LNG system, the gas is converted through cooling to a liquid, shipped by tanker and then turned into gas again when it reaches its destination.

Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd., one of two companies seeking to build a pipeline from the North, said in a submission to the National Energy Board that it had examined tankers and had "a low level of technical confidence in this system."

But the association said the tankers are being used to carry gas from the Middle East and North Africa to Europe, the United States and Japan. It said the "technology is well proven."

The association said a study of the tankers should be started immediately and completed by the end of the year.

CANDU Sale To Argentine Still in Red

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada still stands to lose an estimated $24.5 million or more on its already-approved first export sale of a 600-megawatt CANDU nuclear reactor to Argentina, despite the recent renegotiation of the original contract by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. to take into effect recent rampant inflation in Argentina.

The estimate of a $24.5 million loss compares with the original AECL loss estimate before a contract renegotiation of a minimum $96 million and is based on revised contract figures released by the head of Argentina's National Atomic Energy Commission Monday.

Dr. Carlos Castro Madero, visiting Canada to discuss the possibility of Argentina purchasing a second CANDU reactor, said that Argentina agreed to renegotiation the original 1973 contract with AECL in light of what her termed "the recognition of drastic economic changes" in Argentina since 1973.

He was referring to inflation that at times reached 200 and 300 per cent a month but which is most recently down to about 30 per cent a month.

Despite the drop in Argentina's inflation rate in recent months and despite the renegotiated contract for the first CANDU reactor, Argentina has been told by Canadian nuclear authorities this week that consideration of the purchase of a second CANDU reactor will have to wait until the economic situation in Argentina stabilizes, Dr. Castro Madero said during a news conference.

He estimated that the economic situation should be stabilized in about a year, which should give Argentina time to observe how construction of the first CANDU reactor is progressing before negotiating the sale of a second reactor.

He also estimated that the governments involved in the first CANDU sale — Canada, Italy and Argentina — should have ratified the renegotiated contract in time for the deliveries of key nuclear components from Canada for the Argentine CANDU reactor to start in May of 1977, as scheduled.

Work on the non-nuclear civil facilities in Argentina has already started.

An Italian engineering firm is participating in the contract with AECL to build the first CANDU reactor for Argentina, scheduled for completion by late 1980.

AIB STANDING ADAMANT OVER AIR SAFETY PAY REDUCTION

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board announced Monday it will not change a previous decision reducing pay increases offered aircraft safety inspectors employed by the federal government.

In another announcement, the board ordered cuts in pay increases in contracts between Ottawa board of education and 2,000 elementary school teachers and maintenance personnel.

About 330 workers, who inspect aircraft safety equipment and test pilots and who are represented in contract talks by the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, are deliberating on what future action to take, a spokesman said. The Anti-Inflation Board said it found no basis for special consideration which would permit inspectors' annual pay increases to exceed $2,400—the maximum allowable under Canada's selective wage controls.

This decision amounted to a rejection of a May arbitration report by Mr. Justic Emmett Hall, who called for salary increases of $3,700 in the first year and $2,218 in the second year of a new contract.

Inspectors went on strike June 25 when original board decision was announced. Since June 28, the union has reduced this to a selective strike of about 60 inspectors at Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa and Vancouver.

A contract covering the first eight months of 1976 had provided a pay increase of 23 per cent for 1,284 elementary teachers, but the board said this should be reduced to 10 per cent.

The board said the teachers were strictly eligible for only 5.33 per cent over the eight months, but that the greater amount was in recognition of historical relationships — with Ottawa secondary school teachers and teachers at nearby school boards—"to the extent reconcilable with the objectives of the anti-inflation program."

A 13-month contract, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976, had provided 885 maintenance workers with a wage increase of 10.88 per cent, but the board said this should be reduced to eight per cent over the first 12 months.

Pitfield Defended

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday he is satisfied that Michael Pitfield, clerk of the privy council and secretary to the federal cabinet, acted in good faith when he applied for — and received — a $1,000 Ontario housing subsidy to which he was not entitled.

"I am satisfied there was good faith in that particular case," Trudeau said in reply to questions by Ray Hnatyshyn (PC—Saskatoon-Biggar).

The grant to Pitfield was discovered by Ontario revenue ministry auditors checking the program, devised to aide persons buying a home for the first time. He returned the $1,000 after it was proven he first owned a home in 1965.

Pitfield said he thought the grants were available to people who did not own a house at the time.

Canada Reserves Rise by $172.5M

OTTAWA (CP)—The value of Canada's international reserves rose by $172.7 million during June, the finance department reported Monday.

The total value of the reserves at June 30 was $5.9847 billion, up from $5.8120 billion on May 31. The reserves are measured in United States dollars.

Most of the increase was accounted for in holdings of U.S. dollars, which rose by $157.6 million to $3.8296 billion. Holdings of other foreign currencies rose $300,000 to $10.7 million and gold reserves increased $2.4 million to $869.6 million.

Special drawing rights rose $1.6 million to $550.2 million, while Canada's reserve position in the International Monetary Fund rose $10.7 million to $724.4 million.

The totals for individual categories of reserves are rounded by the finance department and do not add.

Air Bilingualism Row Splits Tory Caucus

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The bilingualism-in-the-air controversy has divided not only the Liberal caucus, but also the Conservative one.

Ged Baldwin (PC — Peace River) issued a statement Monday in which he lectured his Commons colleagues against trying to "bottle up" the problem of bilingualism. To adopt such an approach "will surely mean a bigger explosion some time in the future" he warned.

The incorporation in the settlement of the controllers and air pilots dispute, of a clause under which Parliament would be given a free vote on whether to accept the findings of the commission came as a result of Baldwin proposing in the house June 25 that it be brought before the house.

Some members are concerned that this will plunge them once again into a divisive bilingualism debate.

Baldwin has come under criticism from several Tory MPs for making this suggestion which was quickly picked up and acted upon by Prime Minister Trudeau and Transport Minister Otto Lang.

Some New Democratic Party members are also alarmed that Parliament will end up, not debating the settlement of the dispute as proposed by the commission, but the issue of bilingualism.

When the debate will take place is anybody's guess at this time.

The report will not likely be issued until a year from now, or later.

That means the debate may not take place until the autumn of 1977 with a general election likely to be held in the spring of 1978.

Baldwim reacted indignantly to suggestions from some MPs parliament should try to avoid such a debate.

He said in an interview that no one should by trying to "run away and hide from the issue of bilingualism." If and when the commission makes its settlement of the air dispute it should be brought before the house by way of a motion which would underwrite the government's guarantee that no steps and no action will be taken to implement bilingualism for air traffic controllers unless and until certain condition have been met.

"It is better that we pick up the ball and run with it than try to avoid it," said Baldwin.

In the commons Monday John Diefenbaker, former prime minister, tried to pin down Trudeau on an interview he gave when flying back to Ottawa from the Puerto Rico economic summit conference.

Trudeau was reported to have said the agreement arranged by Transport Minister Lang marked a "victory for bilingualism in Canada."

Trudeau explained that the interview was sought on board the aircraft by the press.

"He (Diefenbaker) will have to remember that these were opinions which were given as it were, on the fly," the prime minister punned.

When Diefenbaker asked again if the prime minister regarded the settlement as a victory for bilingualism Trudeau retorted: "All sides of the house have approved the bilingualism policy. They support it and they will make sure that the country accepts it."

"That is not an answer, that is simply an evasion," snapped Diefenbaker.

Later outside the house Baldwin, former Progressive Conservative House leader, dismissed as an "unrealistic" attitude the idea that bilingualism is a potential "political embarrassment" and that it should never again be discussed in parliament.

"This has been, is and will continue well into the years ahead to be a large national issue. Many here in Ottawa do little to restore the sagging prestige of government, parliament and the media by pretending that everything is OK and the current dispute just an aberration," said Baldwin.

Conservatives Fear 'Mad Dogs'

OTTAWA (CP)—Several Progressive Conservative MPs called upon their colleagues Monday to back retention of the death penalty for treason to help avoid the possibility of an attack upon the Queen at the Montreal Olympic Games.

During Commons debate on a government bill abolishing capital punishment for all crime, the Conservatives said "mad dogs" who commit treason are impossible to rehabilitate.

They were backing a proposal by John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) to retain the death penalty for treasonous acts against the state and attacks upon the Qleen. A vote on the amendment was deferred until Thursday.

Bob Brisco (PC—Kootenay West), reminding the House of the 1970 October crisis involving separatist kidnappers in Quebec, said the world has seen the advent of a time when terrorism is rampant.

"We should ponder on what kind of television appearance the prime minister will have to make if some mad dog of an assassin tries to kill the Queen at the Olympics," he said.

Brisco said death is still the penalty for treason in England.

Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock), who termed "heroic" the Israeli commando raid in Uganda that freed more than 100 hostages, said there are men and women in this and other countries who are deliberately villainous.

"It is in our enlightened self-interest to entertain pass this amendment which will preserve the freedom in our country to live in peace and tranquility," Friesen said.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) said removal of the death penalty for treason would tempt the government into proclaiming the stringent War Measures Act more often.

"That is the sham of this abolitionist cabinet," he added. "They want to do away with justice and take the law into their own hands."

Horner said by supporting the amendment dealing with treason MPs would not defeat the bill to abolish the death penalty for other crimes.

"In fact, it will probably result in the Olympics running a little smoother," he said.

IS IT CHEMISTRY?

By HARRIET HART

According to the folder, Questions and Answers About Schizophrenia, there is now increasing scientific evidence that schizophrenia is caused by an error in body chemistry. It is a biochemical disease which can physically, mentally or emotionally affect a person of any age.

Conquering Schizophrenia — A New Approach, explains how many physicians successfully treat schizophreniacs by giving them massive doses of vitamins instead of subjecting them to psychoanalysis. It also says that the recovery rate with vitamin therapy is as high as 75 per cent, compared with some 35 per cent with the other treatment methods.

Another folder, Helping Troubled Children, deals with the diagnosis of children with certain types of learning disabilities and how many of them can benefit from vitamin therapy.

medical report

A sick patient who gets better when he is given a sugar pill more, formally known as a placebo, is apt to feel, when he finds out that his medicine was a blank, that he's been cheating and was not really sick or had an unfair trick played on him.

Neither may be true. The patient whose toothache leaves him as he enters his dentist's office or whose bellyache disappears when he has made an appointment with his doctor is not a malingerer, nor must he label himself a neurotic.

Nobody quite knows the mechanism of much pain or how the return of well-being comes about. But among doctors who have what, for lack of a better term we call a, "healing gift," there is a common truism: If a patient doesn't feel better when he sees his doctor, the patient is either very sick or is seeing the wrong doctor.

The situation is even more complicated when a patient is given medication that is, or is presumed to be effective, in a given disease.

Just because a patient gets well when he takes medicine, by no means is it certain that he got well because of the medicine.

A way of finding out how effective a given medicine is to treat half of a group of patients suffering a given illness with a specific medication and the remaining half with a placebo.

The outward appearance of the active pills and the placebo should be identical. The patients ideally should not know what they are receiving.

And the doctors in charge should be equally in the dark as to who is getting what if the study is to be as free as possible of bias for or against the medicine being tested.

When such strict "double-blind" requirements are adhered to, the results often are surprising. Medication long considered to be effective in this or that disease may turn out to be no more effective than a sugar pill.

Or the medicine under study may turn out on such close scrutiny to be actually harmful.

Perhaps the least well understood and often the least taken into consideration is that the administration of placebos — presumably inactive medications, classically referred to as sugar pills — is customarily associated with a considerable and often significant number of patients who get well.

However, when the number of happy outcomes associated with the placebo is the same as with the drug under test, the latter is considered to have been of no therapeutic use.

When a difference exists between the two, mathematical calculations are made to determine how great are the chances that the good results achieved with the drug might have occurred by chance.

Finding patients that are comparable in age, sex and degree of illness in sufficiet numbers to provide statistically significant results is often very difficult. Consequently, studies are frequently conducted in a number of centres simultaneously and the results are then pooled.

Sometimes when a drug under test is found to be clearly effective and perhaps lifesaving, the placebo which the control group is receiving is discontinued and so is the study. Then everybody can have the benefit of effective treatment.

Conversely, if toxic side effects turn up too insistently, the test may have to be called off entirely in the interest of the first principle of therapeutics — which is "to do no harm."

It is hoped that by means of enough "double-blind" studies, what has been called the art of treatment will be transformed into the science of therapeutics. Perhaps in the course of such studies we may also find out what it is that a placebo does when it seems to work.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS'
Syrup from Rose Hips

Wild roses — 35 or so varieties — grow in fencerows, vacant lots, meadows and open woods all over Canada and the U.S. The seed pods or "hips" remain on the branches all winter and can be picked when other wild fruits are (like summer) only a pleasant memory.

The rose, oddly enough, is related to the apple and bears a seed pod which is rather similar in flavor. This fruit is especially valuable because of an amazing fact: just three rose hips contain as much vitamin C as one orange. Here's how to capture that goodness in a delicious syrup:

Gather red, slightly unripe hips and remove the bud ends. Boil the fruit to softness in a small amount of water. Strain off the liquid, add fresh water, and repeat the process. Then stir in 1 cup sugar or ½ cup honey for each 2 cups of juice, boil the syrup to the desired thickness, let it cool and store in sterilized bottles. This tasty vitamin supplement is widely used in Europe.

Bogus Marriage Crackdown

BOMBAY (CP) — Indian police have started a drive against what the press calls "bogus marriages."

Several prominent feminist leaders and politicians have complained that crooks have entered the marriage business in a big way.

As Jyotsna Desai, a social worker of Ahmedabad, capital of Gujarat State, explains, the racket operates as follows:

"About half a dozen young men get together and hatch a scheme to befriend lonely women, daughters from poor families and widows.

"With the assistance of one or two elderly crooks posing as priests, who act as intermediaries, they offer to marry the girls on payment of sums ranging from $50 to $300. But on the day fixed for the wedding the bridegroom disappears."

Mrs. Desai said at least six girls have committed suicide in Ahmedabad and its suburbs in the last year after being cheated by the marriage racketeers.

Parvati Krishnan, a Communist MP, told Parliament recently that the racket has been reported from many areas.

Mrs. Krishnan said matrimonial advertisements in newspapers are partly responsible for the racket.

Some newspapers have now started checking on suspicious sounding matrimonial ads before printing them.

Many MPs have demanded compulsory registration of all marriages as one way to smash the racket. Under the present Indian law registration of marriages is not required.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

I have a Table Fern, a member of the Pteris family, that is acting very strange. It's a small plant and I've had it only five months. It's in a hanger in the kitchen just to one side of the window. All of a sudden it has sent out three very long but spindly leaves on one side. Also, regarding my Emerald Ripple Peromia, should I pinch back those spiky, seedy shoots? There are 12 of them in varying stages of growth on a plant with 30 leaves. Thank you for all the help—past, present and future.—J.R.

Dear J.R.:

We would have to surmise that your Table Fern has sent out leaves on the side closest to the window. In order to insure even growth on any plant, rotate it frequently so that all the sides are exposed to the more direct light. As to the fronds being spindly, that's the way most new shoots on Polypodiums and Pteris and practically all other ferns begin. But right now, in the middle of the growth season, it probably would be a good idea to get yourself some good, acid-base plant food and give your fern a little snack. And remember, you're dealing with chemicals here, so feed only one-half strength of what the instructions say on the bottle.

As to pinching off the shoots on your Emerald Ripple, the answer is yes. Oh, you might leave three or four, but basically all they're doing is draining energy that might be going into the plant itself, and they're really not attractive enough to sacrifice your Peperomia.

Doctors Discover Hyperactivity Lasts

CHICAGO (UPI) — Hyperactivity, one of the most common behavior problems of childhood, often stays with a person through his or her adult life, two doctors wrote in a recent issue of an American Medical Association publication.

Harry Borland, Ph.D., and Harold Hockman, M.D., of the Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine in Hershey, interviewed 20 men who had been classified hyperactive children 20 to 25 years ago. The report was published in the June issue of the archives of general psychiatry.

A large majority of men who were hyperactive children had completed high school and each was steadily employed and self-supporting, the researchers said. But half of the men continued to show symptoms of hyperactivity, frequently with psychiatric problems, and often were behind their peers in socio-economic status, they wrote.

The emotional problems of everyday living may result from the persistance of symptoms of hyperactivity, Drs. Borland and Hockman said.

LONDON (CP) — Next year Britain will celebrate the Queen's silver jubilee, the 25th anniversary of her accession. She succeeded King George VI, Feb. 6, 1952. Throughout the year the Queen will fulfil engagements all over Britain. Her tour starts in May, and to coincide with it, the post office is putting out a set of four jubilee stamps.

Like Car Payments

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to say that her husband had gone to a doctor six years ago and had a complete physical examination. The doctor told him he needed an operation. She said her husband never had the operation and never went back, and he's never felt better in his life.

This reminds me of the following:

Doctor to Patient: "You're in bad shape. You should have an operation."

Patient: "How much will it cost?"

Doc: "Eight thousand dollars."

Patient: "Gee, Doc, you know I don't have that kind of money."

Doc: "I'll make it easy for you. Give me $9,000 down and pay me $100 a month until the bill is paid."

Patient: "That's just like buying a new car."

Doc: "I am."—NO DOPE.

DEAR ABBY: I have put off writing to you long enough. I have fallen out of love with my husband. We've been married for eight years, we have two beautiful, healthy children and a nice home. I don't have to work, I have a car of my own, and from all outside appearances I have it made.

My husband is a good father, is generous and is easy to live with and I know he loves me, but I am sick to death of faking it in the bedroom. I just don't feel a thing for him romantically. I respect him and I really like him, but he's more like a big brother than a husband.

I haven't told him how I feel because I just hate to hurt him. He's such a decent guy. He really deserves better than a wife who can't return his love. We talk about everything but this. Please help me.—TIRED OF ACTING

DEAR TIRED: Tell your husband that you and he should see a marriage counsellor. Then do it. If you can't work through the problems that have made you more of a "sister" than a loving wife, level with him. You're right. He deserves better. And there's much more to marriage than you're getting.

DEAR ABBY: I have something to say to HISTORY BUFF who claims that a double-wedding ring ceremony has no meaning. According to him, his old German Bible (1888) says the wedding ring signifies that a woman is no longer a free and independent person, but she's in bondage to her husband. She owes him obedience as a subject owes obedience to his master.

Well, in MY book, a double-ring ceremony joins a man and woman together in holy matrimony as equals.

So, HISTORY BUFF, stick it in your ear and blow it through your nose. For your information, I am only 12, and I plan to have a double-ring ceremony whether you like it or not!—A STRONG VIEW AT 12

DEAR STRONG VIEW: My guess is you're speaking for the second generation of women's libbers, right?

DEAR ABBY: Last week on the way home from work, my husband and I saw a little girl on the side of the road who had just been hit by a truck. That was bad enough, but when the ambulance arrived they found no identification on the girl, and no one knew who or where her parents were, so all they could do was take her to the hospital. At the hospital they couldn't do anything without parental consent because she was a minor.

If that child had been wearing an I.D. bracelt or necklace her parents could have been easily located and treatment could have been started sooner.

We make sure our pets have tags because they can't tell people where they live, but a child who is unconscious can't talk either. Please print this.— J.L.E.

DEAR J.L.E.: Pets are tagged because it's required by law, but you make a good point. An I.D. bracelet or necklace would make an ideal gift for a child's birthday or Christmas. And include the child's blood type. It could be a life-saver. Think about it.

How to Grow Good Strawberries

The growing of strawberries is more or less a tradition with home gardeners. Many methods of culture are used, mostly based on commercial field growing, which may or may not be successful in the home garden.

There is a common belief that strawberry plants are good for only three years, but that idea is refuted by a report of an English gardner who has cropped the same plants for 20 years.

The bed was originally prepared with compost and old manure. It is heavily dressed with compost each spring, and the only fertilizer used is sulphate of potash at the rate of 2 ozs. to the square yard.

The plants are set two feet apart, and in the photographs are now nearly touching and about 14 to 18 inches in height. The variety is the old "Royal Sovereign", not to be confused with "British Sovereign" which is a selection from "Royal Sovereign" found on a strawberry farm in the Fraser Valley and originally named "British Columbia Sovereign".

It is well known that a strawberry variety must be suited to the soil and definite soils are recommended for strawberry farms, but for the few plants grown in the home garden a suitable soil can be made.

One thing to be avoided is fresh manure. It contains too much free nitrogen which results in rank growth and soft berries of poor quality. Seven-year fertilizer tests have shown the plants respond only to sulphate of potash, which produces firm and best flavored fruits.

Gardners who replace their plants frequently depend on runner plants from their own stock. Unless these runners are properly selected, the crop decreases over the years and the bed finally becomes barren of fruit.

There is a reason for this condition. Strawberries can be propagated from seed or runners, seed being used mainly in the search for new varieties.

Runners are used because the plants produced in this way are almost identical with the parent plant that produced the runner. But there is a catch to this production of runners.

The plants which produce the most berries, that is the most seed, rarely produce a runner until the soil at the roots becomes short of nutrients. The runners are made so that new plants can root in a richer soil.

On the other hand, plants which produce very few fruits make quantities of runners, and the runner plants, like the parent plants, never produce many berries.

When the home gardener propagates new stock from these masses of runners, fruit production diminishes and the bed finally becomes useless.

The report mentioned above proves that it is unnecessary to make frequent replacements if the soil is kept fertile, and fresh manure and mixed fertilizers avoided.

In the home garden with poor strawberries, the logical procedure would be to make a new bed of compost and old manure and leave it to settle, watering regularly and cultivating to work out the weeds.

This season, destroy all plants in the old bed which make a lot of runners, and next year select from the remainder those plants which produce the most fruits. These can be removed to the new bed in late August to early September. They must make new roots before the growing season ends.

Then by selecting runners from the best fruiting plants, if and when they are produced, a stock of good fruiting plants will result which can be cropped for years if the humus is constantly replenished.

Fifty strawberry plants take considerable space in a small garden. Unless they supply sufficient fruit for eating fresh and processing for winter use, it would be better to purchase a few berries in season and use the space for nutritious winter vegetables.

Oak Bay Anxious to Back 'Responsible' School Taxes

Setback Limit Reaffirmed

Contractor-developer George Wheaton appealed to Oak Bay council Monday for relaxation of setback requirements for a proposed 19-unit condominium building at 1175 Newport, overlooking Windsor Park.

Aldermen reaffirmed a 45-foot limit on height and approved a tentative plan to eliminate ground-floor commercial space from the original concept.

The building would contain five floors, and all but one would have four apartments.

Wheaton said the affirmation of height restriction will enable him to prepare more detailed plans for submission later on the question of side setbacks. He said an architect has advised the setbacks dictated under existing requirements would make a commercial building uneconomical.

The site at present is occupied by two old frame buildings containing a grocery and a television service shop.

In a separate application, Ken Henderson, president of Henderson Realty, asked permission to demolish the Twin Cedars apartments at Transit and Newport to erect a 10-unit condominium structure 35 feet high with 150 per cent surface parking.

Henderson also asked for relaxation of setback requirements for his three-storey frame building that would cover 26 per cent of the 11,500 square foot site.

He was told council's policy for condominium structures requires masonry or reinforced concrete construction.

"I didn't know that," Henderson said.

His application was referred to committee.

Oak Bay aldermen expressed a desire Monday to help Greater Victoria school board bring responsibility to school taxes.

Their reaction was in response to 18 letters from taxpayers upset at the 20-to-25 per cent jump in taxes last month.

Mayor Brian Smith said he hoped the school board would have representation from the municipal council next year and that more provincial government funds would be made available to school districts to keep the mill rate down.

"We've got to shape them or these tax increases will be horrendous and too difficult to bear," Smith said.

Finance chairman Norman Pimlott pointed helplessly to the fact that a 17-mill increase in 1976 taxes, 11 are due to school requirements and only three each to debt retirement (largely the recreation centre) and general municipal purposes.

Ald. Shirley Dowell said to make it clear the council is not responsible for the heavy tax burden imposed by schools, there could be separate billings for municipal and school taxes.

"It is very hard to hold your head high and say we've tried to keep taxes down this year," Pimlott complained.

"We have no jurisdiction. The taxpayer of Oak Bay must look very closely at how his taxes have been distributed and where the increases are coming from."

It was either council input at the school board level, or a balancing of the school budget, Pimlott said.

He added the Greater Victoria school tax hike was double that of any other district in B.C.

One writer complained her taxes had jumped $156, "practically for 24 garbage collections, that's the service we got from you."

Letter writers took potshots at council's plan to build $500,000 worth of tennis courts, and to allow the Capital Improvement District Commission to spend funds in a seawall at Shoal Bay.

BOMB BLAST KILLS 21

RANGOON (UPI) — Twenty-nine persons were killed and about 300 wounded when a Second World War mortar shell exploded in a village near the former royal capital of Mandalay.

The shell exploded as two men hit it with a hammer in an attempt to open it. Sixty-one of the wounded were admitted to Mandalay hospital.

CHINA LEADER DIES

TOKYO (AP) — Chu Teh, considered the grand old man of the Chinese Communist armed forces, died in Peking today, Peking radio reported. He was 90.

As chairman of the standing committee of China's National People's Congress, Chu had functioned since January, 1975, as the equivalent of China's head of state.

In that capacity, he had met in Peking on June 22 with Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser. He took over the job of meeting foreign dignitaries earlier in June after Communist party officials decided that 82-year-old party Chairman Mao Tse-tung no longer would do so.

Chu also was a member of the inner ruling circle, the standing committee of the party Central Committee's political bureau.

Peking radio broadcast a joint announcement by the Central Committee, the Congress's standing committee and the State Council, the equivalent of China's cabinet.

Chu was military commander of the 1934 Long March by Mao and 90,000 Communist followers, who marched 6,000 miles to avoid encirclement by Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang forces.

Chu, born in 1886 of a Szechuan peasant family, embarked on his long military career in 1909 by enrolling in the Yunan Military Academy, where he was exposed to the revolutionary ideas of Sun Yat-sen.

While Mao was the dominating influence, Chu showed his fighting skill by five times breaking out of encirclement by Chiang Kai-shek's troops.

It was at this time that Chu formulated the rules that gave the Communist army a boost in the eyes of foreign observers in contact with the Communists.

First were the "three principles of discipline"—always obey orders, do not take a single needle or a single thread from the people and hand over all captured property to the authorities.

The "eight rules of conduct" were be friendly in speech, be just in business transactions, always return anything borrowed, give compensation for damaged property, do not beat up or bully the people, be careful to protect the crops, do not flirt with women, do not torture prisoners of war.

Cosmic Ice Hockey Played on Mars

PASADENA (UPI)—Viking 1 scientists have a new game —"cosmic ice hockey"—using an ellipse, or possible landing site, as a puck that moves around until it finds its goal on Mars.

Dr. Hal Masursky, head of the landing site team, Monday described the possible landing site as an ellipse — an egg-shaped area in which the lander will put down July 17 after rockets separate it from the orbiter.

This ellipse, he said, is moved around within the selected possible landing site until a desirabe site—one that is not too rough or rocky—is found.

"It's what we call cosmic ice hockey with the ellipse as the puck," he said.

Viking has a 99.7 per cent chance of landing within the 149-mile by 62-mile ellipse after it separates from the orbiter and a 50 per cent chance of landing within a chosen area about half that size.

Viking has been sending back data on the make-up and condition of the red planet and is a "magnificent achievement" even if life is not discovered there, scientsists said.

Dr. Harold Klein, head of the biology team, said he was concerned that too much emphasis was being placed on the biology experiments of Viking and pointed out there were 13 other experiments besides the life-seeking ones.

The mission should not be viewed as only a search for life, he added, but should be lauded for all the other information gained.

tion were pictures of the C-1 site, a probable landing area for Viking 2, scheduled to orbit Mars Aug. 7 and land Sept. 4.

Among the newest information

Dr. Michael Carr said the photos show plains between craters, dune fields and long channels that could have been caused by lava, streams of water or underground flows of liquid water or lava.

CARTER EYES FIVE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Jimmy Carter is not saying who tops his list of vice-presidential running mates on the Democratic ticket, but delegates to the party's convention name Gov. Edmund Brown of California and Senator Frank Church of Idaho as their top choices for the second spot.

Carter, who has enough delegate votes to win the Democratic presidential nomination, says he will interview five possible running mates before the convention.

His first interview was with Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine in Plains, Ga., on Monday. Carter said that because Muskie was the first to be interviewed does not mean he is the first choice.

The former Georgia governor, who has not released the names of the four other contenders besides Muskie, has said no one speaks for him on this decision.

Bombs Set Saturday?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The terrorist New World Liberation Front (NWLF) says it has planted three time bombs to go off by Saturday at two Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (PGE) sites in the San Francisco Bay area.

A communique, released Monday and signed by the NWLF Central Command, warned Pacific employees to stay away from work until after July 10 so they won't be hurt.

A spokesman for the utility said employees should report to work and that operations will continue as usual.

At a news conference, a member of an above-ground support group for the NWLF read the communique warning of the bombs and threatening further attacks.

Ande Lougher of NWLF People's Information Relay-1 quoted the communique as saying three "calendar clocks are placed at two PGE sites in the Bay Area."

"I don't think PGE workers will lose their jobs (for staying away from work)," Miss Lougher said, "and if they do, that just says something for PGE."

The terrorist group has claimed responsibility for sabotaging PGE facilities five times since March 21, 1975.

Groups using the name NWLF have claimed responsibility for a number of bombings, including one earlier this year at the Hearst Castle in San Simeon, a police-car bombing in Marin County and explosions at foreign consulates and corporate offices in the San Francisco Bay area.

The NWLF has demanded that PGE pay 50 per cent of the cost of bringing slum housing in San Francisco up to building codes. It also has demanded that the company provide free utility service to the unemployed and those over 65 forced to live on fixed incomes.

U.S. Coal Embargo Remote

MONTREAL (CP)—The possibility of a United States embargo on coal shipped to Canada is remote, says a report released Monday by the Canadian-American Committee.

And even if U.S. consumption increases, Canada will be able to continue importing large quantities of coal, it added.

"Developments (in the U.S.) coal market are unlikely to create unmanageable problems for Canada in securing U.S. coal," says Richard Gordon, author of the report entitled Coal and Canada-U.S. Energy Relations.

Ontario, Canada's biggest user of U.S. coal, should have no problems in continuing to import coal until a cheaper way is found to bring Western Canadaian coal to eastern markets.

He said problems such as mine health and safety laws, strip-mining regulations and sulfur-emission controls will prevent a shift toward greater coal consumption in the U.S.

Even if consumption does increase significantly, Gordon does not believe the U.S. would institute coal embargos, seriously hurting Canadian steel mills and hydro plants.

FAMILY SEX BIAS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal officials have decided that public schools in the United States may no longer sponsor father-son or mother-daughter events because they violate new rules aainst sex discrimination.

In a letter cleared through Washington channels, John Palomina of the San Francisco regional Office for Civil Rights wrote to Arizona school officials telling them "functions such as father-son or mother-daughter breakfasts would be subjecting students to separate treatment and would not be permitted."

B.C. Loses PWA Bid

The Canadian Transport Commission has denied B.C.'s application to prevent Pacific Western Airlines from moving its head office and main overhaul base from Vancouver to Alberta, it was announced today.

The shift would mean the loss of more than 550 jobs to B.C.

PWA's 49-member executive staff would be accompanied by another 509 support staff which includes mechanics, maintenance personnel and office workers.

Total cost of the proposed transfer has been estimated at as much as $5 million.

In its decision, the commission said it "is not convinced the interests of British Columbia will be "seriously and permanently jeopardized" if the move is carried out.

"The attorney-general of British Columbia has not demonstrated that irreparable harm will be caused by the move," it said.

The Alberta government, which acquired control of the airline in a controversial action two years ago, announced last year that it intended to move the head office to Calgary and the overhaul base to Edmonton. Both now are at Vancouver.

The B.C. government said it was concerned that the cost of the move might be reflected in higher air fares, but the commission said it intended "not to allow the carrier to pass through to the consumer any of the costs of the move of this head office unless they can demonstrate that there were offsetting cost benefits flowing from the move."

Pacific Western — Canada's third largest commercial airline — operates scheduled flights in British Columbia, Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

The dispute, in which British Columbia asked the transport commission to intercede two months ago, was dealt with through an exchange of written correspondence rather than through a hearing.

Much of the exchange centred on whether the commission had jurisdiction in the case, with Alberta arguing that it did not.

The commission ruled it had jurisdiction in the case on grounds the licences it regulates require a certain level of service, equipment and facilities at a particular base and that withdrawal of management personnel from a base could affect such requirements.

An earlier decision by the commission that the Alberta government must seek its approval of the PWA takeover now is before the Supreme Court.

SLICK HEIST

MONTERREY (AP)—Guerrillas made off with $423,200 in one of the smoothest and most audacious bank robberies ever seen in Mexico, police said today.

He said five members of the September 23rd Communist League, Mexico's most notorious guerrilla band, staged the hold-up Monday at the Bank of London and Mexico.

Taiwan Olympic Showdown Looms

Times News Services

With the Montreal Olympics only 11 days away, Canadian and International Olympic Committee appeared headed for a last-minute showdown over the status of Taiwan.

Taiwan announced today from Taipei that it's Olympic delegation will set out for Montreal Thursday in defiance of Canada's ban on Taiwanese athletes competing as the Republic of China.

Some Taiwanese athletes, including represenatives in the Olympic sailing competition in Kingston, Ont., are already in Canada.

Canada Monday rejected a demand by the People's Republic of China to ban Taiwanese athletes. External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachern said. But he also refused to alter policy that these athletes enter Canada only as Taiwanese representatives.

MacEachern said officials of his department are willing to meet IOC president Lord Killanin, who arrived in Canada Monday seeking a solution to the problem.

Some observers saw a turn for the better when Killanin, while non-commital, did not reject a Canadian proposal that the IOC revive a 1960 formula under which Taiwanese athletes competed in the Rome Olympics only as Taiwan without carrying the name of the Republic of China.

But Killanin asserted that Canada's action could establish a dangerous precedent for the 1980 Games in Moscow.

"I will not commit myself in any way," Killanin replied to reuests by MacEachern and Prime Minister Trudeau to extend to Canada the same rights granted Italy regarding the Taiwan question.

Killanin repeated accusations he made before his arrival that Canada had violated IOC rules in denying Taiwanese athletes their republican name, anthem and flag at the Games.

And he pointed out that while the Taiwanese competed in Rome under the 1960 agreement, the athletes unfurled a banner proclaiming their protest in the Olympic stadium.

Canada extended official recognition to the Peking government in diplomatic terms in 1970, withdrawing recognition of the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

MYSTERY DIVE: Neither police nor spectators seemed to know who drove this car that ended strung up on a telephone pole guywire in New Westminster. However, they suspect a three-year-old tot, left unattended in the car, released the hand brake causing the vehicle to roll backwards downhill, through an intersection. The unidentified tot was uninjured.

Kinsmen Must Pay $25,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who was injured at a Kinsmen beer garden in Nanaimo nearly two years ago when a man fell 30 feet onto him from a rafter has been awarded $25,000 in damages against the club.

The would-be aerial performer, who called himself Sunshine, escaped without a scratch and hasn't been seen since.

Mr. Justice S. Martin Toy ruled that the Kinsmen Club of Nanaimo "failed to take reasonable care that the patrons . . . were reasonably safe while enjoying themselves in their afternoon and evening of beer drinking."

The injured guest, Robert Jacobson, 34, of Bowser, suffered neck shoulder injuries and has been receiving treatment since the July 21, 1974 mishap.

Half an hour after the doors opened at 2 p.m. a man in his early 20s climbed one of the vertical T-beams, made his way along a cross beam, then lowered his trousers and "flashed a moon."

He descended to the roars of the crowd and a few minutes later want back up, this time with a friend, but he merely drank beer at the top.

Later a third man trying the same stunt reached the top of the I-beam and was walking along a cross girder when he either flipped or deliberately lowered his body so he was swinging by his hands.

And as he tried to swing his legs back over the girder he lost his grip and plunged 30 feet, landing on top of Jacobson who was sitting at a table drinking beer.

Mr. Justice Toy noted that though Jacobson was injured and knocked unconscious, the would-be aerial performer — who later gave his name as "Sunshine" — escaped with only his pride injured.

He held that in view of the two previous impromptu and unauthorized aerial performances by beer garden patrons, the Kinsmen club was liable for Jacobson's injuries because it didn't try to prevent the third episode.

HIJACKER USED TOY GUNS

PALMA, Mallorca (AP) — A young Libyan hijacked one of his country's airliners with 86 persons aboard today but surrendered after the plane landed on the Mediterranean holiday island of Mallorca, airport spokesmen here reported.

The hijacker, identified only as a man opposed to the Libyan regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy, gave up to airport police and turned over two toy pistols and two knives to the chief of the airport, the spokesmen said.

They said no one was injured and the passengers were being looked after by airport authorities.

Officials in Algiers said the hijacked Boeing 727 jetliner had landed previously at Boufarik air base, 20 miles south of Algiers, after being refused permission to land at the Tunis and Algiers airports.

Israel Buries Hero

Times News Services

TEL AVIV—As Israel gave a hero's funeral today to the U.S.-born commando killed in Sunday's raid into Uganda, the Jewish state said it will continue to act as it sees fit to protect its citizens anywhere in the world.

Additional Israeli troops were sent to bolster border defences Monday but the nation appeared calm in the face of Arab anger over the the raid. Sources here denied reports that Israel had called a full military alert.

Officials also urged those nations having civil aviation ties with Israel to increase security measures or face possible sanctions.

Minister of Transport Gad Yaacobi said he also asked airlines that fly from Israel to curtail stopovers at airports lacking proper security facilities. He did not cite any specific airports.

Two of the three Israeli civilians killed in the gun battle Saturday night were buried Monday with military honors.

Speaking at one of the funerals, Israel's chief military chaplain, Brig. Mordechai Piron, said the 2,400-mile three-plane commando raid "was a magnificent, courageous operation, but it is the fate of this nation that every joy and delight be mixed with pain and mourning."

Threats of retaliation from Palestinians in Lebanon and from President Idi Amin of Uganda, did nothing to diminish the pride and rejoicing of the Israelis in their armed forces' most-notable exploit since the defeat of the Arabs in the 1967 Six-Day War.

Amin's threats aroused concern only because one of the Israeli passengers on the hijacked Air France airliner, 75-year-old Dora Bloch, was in a Kampala hospital when the commandos landed, and they could not bring her back. The Israeli government appealed to the International Red Cross and an unidentified third country to secure her release.

NEWS BRIEFS

French Made Him Ill

MONTREAL (CP) — Six English-speaking air-traffic controllers here have asked for immediate transfers out of Quebec. Their request follows the recent transfer of a seventh English-speaking controller to administrative work when he alleged that working with French-speaking controllers made him ill.

LeBlanc Fills In

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc has been named acting environment minister, filling a gap left by the sudden resignation last week of Jean Marchand. LeBlanc was acting environment minister last December and January, before Marchand's appointment.

Genesis Closes

MISSION (CP) — The Genesis halfway house for former prisoners closed Monday following a meeting between the facility's director and the municipal council. The action followed Friday's discovery of the body of Jeanna Doove, 9, of Mission, tied to a tree in a remote part of the Fraser Valley.

460 U.S. Fatalities

CHICAGO (AP) — Traffic deaths on United States highways during the bicentennial weekend totalled 460, falling short of the 630 deaths prediction by the National Safety Council.

Rich, Poor Provinces Split Over Finances

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-day federal-provincial conference of finance ministers on three federally proposed options for limiting Ottawa's direct contributions to several social programs opened here today with apparent disagreement between rich and poor provinces.

Walter Smishek, Saskatchewan finace minister, told reporters the poorer provinces will lose money under the federal options. He said Ottawa should continue the present policy of paying 50 per cent of an average on medical care, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

However, Merv Leitch, the Alberta minister, said the federal proposals do not go far enough in giving the provinces additional tax-raising power.

One federal option is to provide half the costs through cash grants under an undetermined formula and the remainder in tax powers. This would transfer to the provinces the federal excise tax on alcohol, 7.5 per cent of federal income tax and one per cent of federal corporation tax—a package said to be currently worth more than $2.5 billion.

Another option would have Ottawa provide two-thirds of the costs in cash grants and one-third taxing power. This would include the personal and corporate taxation but exclude the alcohol excise tax, now worth about $800 million.

A third option is for Ottawa to provide its entire share in cash grants, which would be controlled by the federal government, rather than the current matching-dollar system.

BIG BILLS NO GOOD IN COMMONS' CAFE

OTTAWA (CP)—Cashiers in the parliamentary restaurant and cafeterias continue to refuse new $50 and $100 bills except if proof of identification is presented and Bill Clarke (PC—Vancouver Quadra) wants to know why.

"I ask the minister how the government expects our system of currency to operate when the House of Commons itself refuses to accept legal tender?" Mr. Clarke asked Finance Minister Donald MacDonald in the Commons on Monday.

Mr. Clarke said he raised the question earlier and was told that the design of the bills was too easy to counterfeit.

But despite the circulation of the newly-designed bills, cashiers still were demanding signatures and addresses of people presenting the bills, he said.

MacDonald promised to look into the question.

RUSSIANS PLACED IN ORBIT

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union today launched a new Soyuz spacecraft with a two-man crew to carry out joint experiments with the orbital space laboratory Salyut 5, the news agency Tass reported.

On board the Soyuz are 41-year-old Boris Volynov, the mission commander, and flight engineer Vitaly Zholobov, 39.

Tass said Volynov has made one previous space flight, aboart Soyuz 5 in January, 1969, while Zholobov is in space for the first time.

Tass did not spell out whether their craft, Soyuz 21, will dock with Salyut 5, which has been in earth orbit since June 22.

But Zholobov's experience as reserve flight engineer for the Salyut 3 space station suggested that a docking is planned.

Avenge Attack

BEIRUT (UPI) — Thousands of Leftist and Palestinian troops attacked the Christian town of Chekka today to avenge the 15-day siege of a Palestinian refugee camp.

Fighting on all fronts gave Lebanon the bloodiest fighting of the 15-month-old war and destroyed the latest Arab League peace efforts.

Casualties were estimated at more than 260 dead and 500 wounded — the worst one day total since April, 1975.

Fighting was reported at Chekka, at the Palestinian refugee camp of Tal Zaatar, in the Christian town of Zghorta, and along the 35-mile confrontation line in Beirut.

The Leftist-Palestinian forces moved against Chekka, 10 miles south of Tripoli, after the Christians launched another offensive to close a 400-yard gap in their circle around Tal Zaatar.

Heavy fighting around the camp in southeast Beirut blocked the second attempt by the Red Cross in two days to send a convoy into the camp to "evacuate hundreds of wounded who have been without water and medical supplies for days.

Olympic Dry Run

MONTREAL (CP)—Clerks and cashiers in publicly-owned liquor stores went on strike here Monday and promised to make a bottle of liquor a hard item to buy during this month's Olympic Games.

The strike closed all liquor stores Monday in greater Montreal as well as other Quebec communities which are hosting Olympic events.

Union leaders admitted the strike will not affect bars or restaurants here, which have ample supplies to see them through the Olympic period.

Voodoo Crash Probe

COMOX — A shore and sea search for the missing body of pilot Capt. Leslie John Cox, 32, of Comox, continues today after a CF-101 Voodoo jet fighter crashed without warning Monday into the Strait of Georgia.

Crash boats and a Labrador helicopter are combing the shores and chilly waters today and decision will be made soon on whether the Voodoo wreckage will be hoisted 400-feet from the sea bottom, about two miles northeast of the Canadian Forces base at Lazo.

The body of navigator Capt. Roy James Smith, 29, of Kelowna was pulled from the water by a boater shortly after the accident, when nearby pleasure craft and the Sechelt Queen ferry rushed to the site.

An internal board of inquiry composed of senior officers will be set up immediately to investigate the crash, Mayor Denny Ryan, information officer for the Pacific Coast Command said today.

Three CFB Comox aircraft were participating in a formation training stint when Cox's plane made a scheduled break-away from the formation to fly solo, Ryan said.

There was routine radio transmission between the three aircraft prior to the crash, but none to indicate any problems in the Cox aircraft.

The aircraft were practising for summer air shows at Edmonton and Abbotsford and were almost near the end of the 30-minute training session when the aircraft crashed. There was no evidence of either men trying to eject.

One year ago, almost to the day, July 4, at 2:40 p.m. a similar crash occurred when a Voodoo jet crashed into the sea 500 yards off Kin Beach.

Building Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Meetings aimed at settling the six-day strike-lockout in British Columbia's general construction industry were to resume today, with representatives of all 15 building trades unions expected to attend.

Record Loads on Ferries to U.S.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

While the B.C. Ferries are sometimes running half empty, Black Ball and Washington State Ferries from Vancouver Island are doing a record business, spokesmen for the companies said today.

Pat Frumento, district manager for Black Ball Transportation Inc., said traffic is up 12 to 15 per cent on the Victoria to Port Angeles run.

"Most of the increase is due to Canadians trying to save a few dollars," he said.

"There is a slight increase in American traffic but the big increase is in Canadians using our run instead of B.C. Ferries."

Washington State Ferries deputy general manager Ralph White said traffic on the Sidney to Anacortes run is up 8 per cent.

While Americans were staying home for the July 4 holiday, Canadians were filling the vessels, he said.

Traffic on the Marguerite between Victoria and Seattle is also up by about 15 per cent.

Frumento said that while traffic is at record levels, so are the complaints.

He said American visitors are very upset by the high price structure in Victoria and they are cutting short their vacations to return to the U.S.

"One man said he would wait in line several hours rather than have to pay $38 for another night in Victoria. It is clear we are slowly pricing ourselves out of the tourist industry.

"It is not just a few people. A large number of tourists are grumbling and complaining about the prices."

Frumento said Victoria will have to find a way to reduce prices and promote Vancouver Island or it could face a further decline in visitors in future years.

"I have talked to a number of businessmen and there is no doubt tourist spending is down this year. And nobody seems to be doing much about it.

Except for the Empress Hotel, nobody seems to be in the United States selling visitors on the idea of coming to Victoria. A few years ago there was a vigorous promotion campaign but now they just seem to be sitting back and waiting for the tourists to come."

Frumento said he is concerned about the future of the industry, despite the brisk business on the Coho this year.

Meanwhile, in Seattle, tourist officials said they have noticed a small increase in the number of Americans crossing into Canada since the July 4 holiday.

Fears that the Americans might decide to stay home for the whole summer may be premature, they said.

Now that the July 4 holiday is over, American tourists appear to be returning to normal summer holiday patterns.

Chileans May Find Canada Home

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A group of Chilean exiles who fear for their lives and refuse to leave the Canadian Embassy where they took refuge last Friday may end up in Canada.

Embassy spokesman Brian Long said Monday the embassy cannot grant the 27 exiles permanent asylum in the building but possibly may provide them with visas for Canada.

The group — 10 men, 10 children and seven women — entered the embassy office on the 25th floor of the 30-storey building in downtown Buenos Aires Friday and refused to leave.

Long said the Canadian government has a special program for refugees of the 1973 Chilean coup.

He said the group at the embassy felt threatened in Argentina. A diplomatic source said names of some of the refugees may have been on a list stolen three weeks ago by armed men.

Two days after the robbery, 25 Chileans and Uruguayans were kidnapped from their Buenos Aires hotels and held captive for 24 hours. On their release, they said they were told to leave Argentina and most have done so

"My government is seeking a solution but there has been no break," Long said.

"The matter now is in Ottawa and Argentine authorities have been notified."

Long added that he did not believe a quick solution is possible.

The Argentine military regime, installed after the bloodless March 24 coup that ousted President Isabel Peron, has said it would welcome departure of refugees in the country because some are believed to be aiding leftist guerrillas.

The local office of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees says there are an estimated 25,000 Latin refugees in Argentina, but only 8,000 are legally registered as refugees.

POLICE HUNT ESCAPER

A Canada-wide warrant has been issued for the arrest of a 25-year-old inmate of William Head federal prison who went missing while out on a temporary pass Saturday night.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said Monday Brant Sidney Hodson was allowed out to attend a session at the federal community corrections centre on Pandora but failed to return to prison at his 11 p.m. scheduled deadline. He was reported missing to police 12 hours later.

Hodson, described as six feet three inches tall, 185 pounds, blue eyes, brown shoulder length hair and a Fu Manchu mustache, was serving four years for armed robbery committed in Vancouver early in 1975. He was due for release on March 14, 1978.

African 'Summit' Ends in Discord

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius (UPI) — A four-day summit meeting of the Organization of African Unity ended today in disarray, failing to solve major continental problems and facing several new crises.

Delegates said it was one of the most disappointing and divisive meetings of heads of state in OAU history, attended by a record low number of seven leaders.

The summit approved more than 70 resolutions, but many of them sidestepped major problems or were watered-down versions of original drafts on such issues as South Africa.

The conference failed to heal long-standing and potentially dangerous differences between Ethiopia and Somalia over the future of French Somalitland and between rival factions of the Rhodesian African National Council.

It sidestepped the issue of the Western Sahara, where Algerian-backed guerrillas have been waging a hit-and-run war against Morocco and Mauritania, which annexed the territory last year.

The meeting referred the question to a special summit meeting to be convened at a place and time to be announced later.

The Israeli raid into Uganda and an attempted coup in Sudan presented the 48-member organization with major new problems.

Although Kenya endorsed a resolution condemning Israel for the attack, Nairobi came under criticism from many member states for its apparent co-operation with Tel Aviv.

President Jaafar Numeiry of Sudan made a special trip to the closing session to accuse Libya of masterminding last week's "mad and senseless" attempt to topple him from power.

Libyan spokesman Ali Toureki denied Benghazi was involved and in turn accused Sudan of "collusion" with the United States both in Lebanon and against the Palestinian people.

PRETORIA SCRAPPING AFRIKAANS SCHEME

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The South African government has decided to withdraw the compulsory use of the Afrikaans language in schools, Education Minister M. C. Botha said today.

The use of Afrikaans led to riots in black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria last month in which 176 people died and more than 1,000 were injured.

Botha said that instead of having to teach in both English and Afrikaans, black schools now can choose either.

This decision follows a series of meetings between black leaders and officials of the white government.

Callaghan Visits Belfast

BELFAST (Reuter) — Surrounded by security guards and driven in a bullet-proof car, Prime Minister James Callaghan toured army and police barracks in a surprise one-day visit to Belfast Monday.

It was his first visit from London to Northern Ireland province since becoming prime minister last April.

As home secretary seven years ago he sent in troops to deal with the sectarian strife, and at a conference with army chiefs Monday he said he never envisaged the crisis would continue so long, with a death toll of almost one person a day.

During a 40-minute walk around the capital he told one shopper:

"Only you, the people of Northern Ireland, will solve this problem. Only you will decide when you are ready to live with one another. Don't ask me to solve the problem of the communities living together: It is not something I can do."

Later, in a speech to social and community workers, Callaghan condemned what he called the "brutal and senseless killing and violence" perpetrated by Catholic and Protestant extremists.

"Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom and will not cease to be part of the U.K. unless it is the clear wish of the majority that the links should be severed," he said.

Student Work Claims Rapped

Public statements made recently by two of the University of Victoria Alma Mater Society executive members criticizing governments for student unemployment, have in turn been criticized by the president of the society.

Alistair Palmer said a press release put out by vice-president Brian Gardiner and academic affairs chairman John Luton which was published in both Victoria daily newspapers June 26 contained statements which were both "unconstitutional and incorrect."

Gardiner and Luton had blamed the provincial and federal governments for the lack of summer job opportunities for students and urged students to mount a letter-writing campaign to their MLAs and MPs.

They blamed the provincial government for "severely crippling the Island tourist industry," citing the increases in B.C. Ferries rates and Insurance Corporation of B.C. premiums.

The federal government was criticized for cutbacks in Opportunities for Youth programs and Local Initiatives Projects, and for tightened regulations for unemployment insurance benefits.

But Palmer suggested there was a conflict of interest in the positions of his two colleagues, saying they were in a position to use the AMS to "promote their own beliefs and party interests."

Palmer said both Gardiner and Luton are members of the NDP club at UVic and are employed with the provincial government.

Palmer said he was the constituted spokesman for the society and any policy statements, unless otherwise directed by the AMS council, would be made through the president's office.

"There is without a doubt a lot of animosity on my council and I have tried to cope with it in a reasonable fashion, but they've stretched me to my limit."

Ferry Crew Stars In Rescue Drama

A man in his 70s jumped off the B.C. Ferries Queen of Esquimalt late Monday afternoon leaving behind his wallet, watch and a note apologizing to other passengers for any inconvenience he might cause them.

For 15 minutes, several hundred passengers watched the drama as the ferry crew lowered a lifeboat and fished the man out of the water.

Delta municipal police have not identified the man, believed from the Lower Mainland, but said he is in stable condition today in Richmond General Hospital.

The incident occurred near Active Pass when the ferry was about 40 minutes out of Tsawwassen on the 5 p.m. run to Swartz Bay.

Mrs. Cecile Martin, of Kelowna, said she was in the lounge near the newstand when she saw a man dressed in olive green trousers and a short-sleeved green shirt climb onto a box and stand on the starboard deck railing. He stood there for about 10 seconds, she said, before disappearing over the side.

"It all happened so fast," she said. "We realized he was about to jump but there was nothing we could do because we were inside."

Another woman passenger standing near the man screamed for help, Mrs. Martin said.

Within seconds the ferry began to turn around and eight to nine crew members clambered into a lifeboat on the port side.

Passenger Roger Hollick, of Victoria, said the crew had problems lowering the lifeboat.

"It took close to 10 minutes to get it into the water," he said.

Once in the water the crew seemed to have difficulty getting away from the side of the ship, Hollick said, adding it took them about three minutes to reach the man who by this time was floating face-down.

He said there were rumors among some passengers the ferry had run over the man as it approached him to pick him up.

"One moment he was lying face up in the water," said a passenger. "The next time I looked he had bobbed up on the other side of the ferry; face-down."

The captain, however, later took to the ship's public address system, denied the rumor, and read out a note apparently left by the man apologizing for the trouble he would cause.

"Once they got him aboard the lifeboat they worked on him constantly," he said. "They applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, pumped on his back and put a piece of rope in his mouth to keep him from choking. I must say they did all they could to help him."

Two doctors on board the ferry applied first aid until the ferry reached Tsawwassen where an ambulance took the man to hospital.

CROW LAW?

Residents of south Oak Bay feel they have something to crow about. Crows. Too many of them.

A petition with 56 signatures landed before aldermen at council meeting Monday seeking some action against the noisy black scavengers which Mrs. Kathryn Botting, 620 Newport, feels are threatening songbirds.

Mayor Brian Smith observed the problem has arisen before and the municipality had found itself powerless to deal with the nuisance.

"Any time we've tried to take any action, we've found we had very little effective jurisdiction over crows. And we have found there's a crow's protection league? . . ." Smith said.

The petition was sent to committee for study.

Saanich to Call Hearing On Wicklow-Tolmie Zoning

Saanich will call a public hearing on a rezoning application to build 53 rental apartments at the corner of Tolmie and Wicklow.

The application was turned down at a public hearing on Nov. 4, 1975 because residents were concerned about increased traffic on Wicklow.

In a report from the Saanich advisory planning commission, council was told Monday that siting of the building has now been changed so as to discourage traffic on Wicklow.

The building will contain 40 one-bedroom and 13 two-bedroom units.

Old Sol Was Hot

. . . But Weatherman Gloomily Predicts Showers

If you blinked yesterday and missed the sun, better get up early tomorrow and enjoy old Sol's brief return — there may not be much more for the following few days.

The thermometer hit 24 degrees Celsius about normal for this time of year.

The weather office at the airport reports a series of systems are rolling in off the Pacific, and although the bureau predicts a break Wednesday, it is calling for clouds in the evening.

After that, Victoria is in the path of a closely bunched series of systems that should bring mostly clouds, some showers and possibly rainy periods for at least Thursday and Friday.

Nobody was willing to predict the weekend weather Maybe Monday was summer?

If it was, some managed to enjoy it anyway.

At Willows Beach, Times photographer Bill Halkett found three Mount Douglas High School girls, Bernadette Bieniawski, Donna Hepting and Dana Senini happily cooling off.

Four boys with the same object — to escape the heat — staged a brief sprinkler battle on the cricket field at Beacon Hill Park (below). Park employees quickly chased them off, Halkett reports.

Action on Roads Sought by Council

Saanich is going to tackle the provincial government on two issues where council feels it is being short-changed.

Mayor Ed Lum received unanimous approval Monday to form a delegation to meet with Highways Minister Alex Fraser in an effort to get the minister to change his priorities on the Blanshard Street extension and the widening of the Trans-Canada Highway.

He was also authorized to tell the provincial government Saanich is not in favor of the Helmcken Road site recently approved for the new hospital to replace the Victoria General Hospital.

Lum will also let the senior government know the municipality does not have the money to upgrade roads in the Helmcken area which would act as feeders to the hospital.

Lum told council Monday the cost of upgrading roads in that area is somewhere between $1 million and $1.5 million.

"We don't have any funds for upgrading of roads in the Helmcken area," Ald. Sandy Noel said. "We should make it quite clear to the provincial government that we do not have the funds to upgrade roads for a hospital in the wrong area."

The provincial government has been bandying about plans for the Blanshard extension for more than 15 years. Saanich is upset at Fraser's recent announcement that the extension will take second place to the Trans-Canada Highway project.

The former NDP government had given the green light to the Blanshard extension and work was to have started this year.

The extension would have dovetailed with the shot-down proposal to build the new hospital at Douglas and McKenzie.

"All the technical reviews show that the Blanshard Street extension should have higher priority than the Trans-Canada Highway," Lum said Monday. "They will have a bottleneck at both ends and we will have a very congested Douglas Street on our hands."

Ald. Fred Severson, a city firefighter, said he is concerned about the safety factor if the provincial government insists on building the hospital on Helmcken.

"There are no fire fighting facilities in that area," he said, "Saanich is the closest and would have to come out and assist. Safety . . . this is one of the key areas."

Saanich municipal engineer Cliff Warren today announced a program to upgrade five miles of local roads within the municipality at bargain basement prices.

He said council has made $200,000 available to assist in paying for the projects.

All the work must be initiated by residents through a petition.

The price tag is $12.50 per foot frontage, which will cost residents $60 per year if they have a 50-foot lot. This produces a reconstructed road widened to 22 feet plus an asphalt water stop at the side of the road. In addition, if there is an open drainage ditch it will be enclosed.

Before today any reconstructed road had to be 28 feet wide with full curbs and cost $25 per front foot. This would have cost the homeowner $120 per year instead of $60.

Warren said he hoped residents would take advantage of the lower cost to petition for upgrading of their roads.

There are many places in the municipality where upgrading would be desirable, but Lakehill and Marigold are the centres where potholes are most evident, he said.

"This program is available to all areas of the municipality but we expect that it will have particular value for the northern and western parts," he said.

A resident wishing to have his road upgraded may start his own petition or may obtain a petition form from the municipal clerk.

The petition must be signed by 50 per cent of the resident owners representing two-thirds of the taxable foot frontage, he said.

The petitions are forwarded to the municipal clerk. The project then needs only official council approval before work begins.

Warren said work on the road could begin as soon as six weeks after the petition has been received. Four of the weeks are required for council to complete the formalities of passing the public works bylaw.

If only a small number are received, the municipality would initiate a few petitions in areas where upgrading of roads was overdue.

A petition initiated by Saanich needs 50 per cent of the owner residents but representing only 50 per cent of the taxable foot frontage instead of two-thirds of the foot frontage which is required when a petition is initiated by the residents themselves.

In other Saanich business, the municipality today said it had granted $15,000 to help pay costs of hiring 30 people for environmental work this summer.

A total of 27 students age 17 to 19 are working with three military supervisors on Swan Lake walkways, Colquitz Creek and other similar projects. Their salaries are paid by the federal department of national defence and the municipal grant helps purchase equipment.

The work began Monday and will continue until the end of August.

Most of those hired are from local high schools while the rest are from the University of Victoria.

Saanich also announced it will build the second all-weather soccer pitch in the municipality with a completion date set for Sept. 1, 1977. It will be located at Prospect Park.

Farmers Face Financial Chill As Cool Climate Lingers

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

While drought and heat plague Europe lingering cold weather threaten lean times for local farmers.

Jack Wessel, manager of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, estimates that some farmers may lose as much as 25 per cent of their incomes because of poor growing conditions and late crops.

"Depending on the crops being grown and the location the impact (of the weather) will vary," he said, "Any crops requiring sun — like corn, peas and beans — are going to need some pretty intensive heat soon. The yields are down substantially."

Wessel said the poor growing conditions are also compounding the perennial problem of competition from California growers.

California producers wanting to clear their fields of lettuce for new crops can dump lettuce in B.C. at a price of about $3 for 24 heads while local farmers must sell for $4 for 24 heads.

"With their weather they can grow at least two yields," he said. "This is one of the worst situations we face every year. Being so cold and so much further north aggravates the situation."

Dairy farmers can also expect to be hit if a long spell of warm weather doesn't come soon.

Corn and hay being grown for feed is being affected.

"Corn grown for cattle feed grew four inches and just sat there," Wessel said. "Farmers will have to buy more forage from Washington."

George Aylard of the Island Farms Dairies Co-op Association agreed with Wessel the cool weather could result in a loss of 25 per cent in net income for some farmers.

"People who depend on local hay could have problems. It could mean people will be buying more alfafa," Aylard said.

He explained that the longer hay is left standing the more it loses its protein, resulting in the protein having to be replaced through buying other feed.

The normal rainfall for May is 30.5 millimeters. A total of 43.4 millimeters was reported at the Victoria International Airport this year, better than a third more than the average.

The mean temperature for June was 1.7 degrees below normal.

Protests Pound Oak Bay

Protest by the pound piled up at Oak Bay council Monday — mostly letters and petitions against a proposed sewage pumping station on Shoal Bay.

About two pounds of documents were distributed to the alderman and reporters present.

The Shoal Bay protest was referred without discussion to later consideration, following a special public hearing set for 5:15 tonight.

The hearing will be in the Senior Citizens' Centre adjoining the branch library on Monterey in order to accommodate the crowd expected to show up.

Among the material filed were 25 letters either condemnning the site in the 500 block Beach Drive or expressing concern that a less objectionable location had not been proposed.

Book Formula 'Unfair'

Saanich is balking at signing the new intermunicipal agreement for library costs because it considers the formula is unfair.

The crux of the problem is that provincial government property is not included in the cost-sharing formula base for assessment while federal property is.

This means that Victoria's B.C. Hydro site, as an example, would not be included on the assessment roll. The city receives a grant in lieu of taxes on the property.

Ald. David Paterson said Monday because the city has more provincial government property than the other core municipalities it would be getting a better break from the cost-sharing formula.

"The ICBC pay full taxes, as an example, (but is not on the assessment rolls) "municipal administrator Bill Tremayne told council on Monday. "We don't think that's fair. Some changes should be made in the contract."

Mayor Ed Lum said when he and the other mayors met to work out a cost-sharing formula they were told provincial government properties would be included.

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson said the comptrollers of the municipalities were goig to get together to try and solve the problem.

"They should draw up a draft and spell this out," Lum observed, "We don't want arguments at a later date."

The council voted not to take any action until the situation is clarified and the formula meets their satisfaction.

Bad Weather Looming As Maui Racers Plow On

The leaders in the Victoria-Maui sailing classic were heading into bad weather today.

Bill Niemi's Joli of Seattle reported the winds were climbing and there were eight-foot waves.

She took over the lead from Doug Fruer's Ragtime of Seattle on Monday and this morning reported being 210 miles southwest of Cape flattery, 10 miles ahead of Ragtime.

Joli was the first boat to finish the 1974 Maui race.

In third position today was Norman Elliott's Orango-Tang of the Kitsilano Yacht Club, being 60 miles behind the lead boat. Placing next after her in the 32-boat fleet were Per Chistoffersen's Terna III of the West Vancouver Yacht Club and John Long's Trumpeter of Jericho from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

In sixth spot was Al Nelson's Lucifer of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Royal Needs $25,000 Fix

There's nothing so wrong with the municipal-owned Royal Theatre that about $25,000 couldn't set right.

At least that's the preliminary estimate of renovation costs to the 63-year-old building, Victoria's largest and most ornate theatre.

The estimate was contained in a draft copy of a report prepared by consulting engineers Willis Cunliffe Tait and Co., and presented to the tri-municipal Royal Theatre committee last Friday.

Victoria city delegate to the committee, Ald. Ron McKenzie said on Monday the report indicated there was some structural deterioration to the building, primarily in the theatre's bacony ledges.

If the restoration was done, he said, the life of the building would be extended 15 to 25 years.

The report also made it clear, McKenzie said, that a proposal to increase the seating capacity in the threatre from 1,400 to 1,900 would be impractical as it would be too costly and could impair the acoustics. The expansion had been suggested as a possible way of increasing revenues.

McKenzie said the committee has asked for more information from the consultants whose final report isn't expected until later this week.

Meanwhile, negotiations are underway to renew the contract between the Victoria-Saanich-Oak Bay municipal owners of the Royal and principle user, Famous Players.

The old contract expired the end of June.

McKenzie said the committee is seeking an increase in the rent Famous Players pays, from $2,000 a month to $2,200.

In addition, he said, the committee wants to reserve the theatre for 65 days a year for municipal-sponsored shows and community use. Under the old agreement 50 days were set aside for such use with the municialities paying Famous Players a per diem rate of $600 in summer and $800 in winter.
